Earthquakes in Madison County

4.3, 3.9 magnitude quakes shake Red Rock Lakes area

ABIGAIL DENNIS
editor@madisoniannews.com

A 4.3 magnitude earthquake shook the area just north of Red Rock Lakes in southern Madison County in the early morning hours of June 13.

"It was right on the border between Madison and Beaverhead counties," said Madison County director of emergency management Dustin Tetrault. "The epicenter was just along the county line, where the Gravelly Mountains drop into the Centennial (Mountains)."

Tetrault has friends who run a ranch in the area – he called his friend, who said he felt the ground shake enough to wake him up.

"A 4.3 is about the point where you feel it but it doesn't cause damage," Tetrault said.

Since the epicenter was in a remote area, the quake did not cause damage, Tetrault added.

"If it had happened right in the middle of Dillon, there is a possibility you could have seen some damage," he said. "Once you start getting into the fives (on the magnitude scale) you start seeing structural damage."

Seismic activity in the area was not over, however. On June 14 at 8:35 a.m., United States Geological Survey reported a 3.9 quake with an epicenter in the same area.

Tetrault said if you feel an earthquake, you should move to areas of your house absent of heavy objects that could fall.

"Doorways are a good place to stand," he said. "Get away from things that can fall on you."

Dog days of summer hasten snowmelt

'When the melt has started, there is no going back'

ABIGAIL DENNIS
editor@madisoniannews.com

Statewide, runoff came early this year. In the Madison and Ruby valleys, snowpack peaked at the beginning of April for low elevations and mid to late-April at higher elevations, which shifted snowmelt start about two weeks ahead of usual, according to Lucas Zukiewicz, water supply specialist with the Natural Resources and Conservation Service.

"In April, we saw warm temperatures like we're seeing now," Zukiewicz said. "It transitioned our snowpack into melt at the beginning of the month. That persisted through the month of May, though we did see some cooler, wet weather come through. That prolonged it some, but when the melt has started, there is no going back."

Generally, Zukiewicz said we can expect to have 30 to 40 percent of our snowpack still in the mountains in the middle of June. This year, depending on elevation, there is only 10 to 15 percent left to hit the system.

"The snowpack in the mountains generally sustains into the summer, which sustains the system," he said.

The Madison

"Right now, the Madison (River) near West Yellowstone is 54 percent of normal for the same date last year," Zukiewicz said on

Welborn, Shaw win respective seats; race for commissioner narrowed to Allhands, Schulz

editor@madisoniannews.com

As ballot boxes started arriving at the Madison County Administrative Building in Virginia City from precincts around the county after 8 p.m. on June 7, Kim Hudson and many other volunteers got to work.

"I've been doing this since 1982," Hudson said, sending ballots through the automated counter. "The clerk and recorder and election administrator then asked me to help and I've been here ever since."

Out of Madison County's 5,822 registered voters, 2,776 filled out ballots for a 47.68 percent voter turnout.

In the races for state Senate and state House of Representatives, the Republican primary results determined the general election as well – No Democrats filed to run.

For Senate District 36, Jeff Welborn bested Dale Stewart with 56 percent of the vote. Welborn received 1,025 votes to Stewart's 793.

Welborn was grateful the people of Southwest Montana entrusted him to serve in the Senate.

"Please know I am committed to the citizens, our schools and the economic engine of this area," Welborn said. "The long term viability of Virginia City, livestock and disease issues that affect us here, and stable infrastructure funding are priority policy issues we will be addressing during the next legislative session."

As for House District 71, incumbent Rep. Ray Shaw from Sheridan received 1,247 votes to beat former Rep. Bob Wagner, of Harrison, who got 716 votes – Shaw won with 63 percent of the vote.

"I am excited about getting to go back to Helena to represent House District 71," Shaw said. "Knowing well the infrastructure situation is going to be a big deal."

Shaw said brucellosis, bison and Virginia City are other "big issues" specific to Madison County.

"If we don't get the bison issue straightened out, it won't be too many years until there are bison in the Madison Valley," he said, referring to Gov. Steve Bullock's new bison management plan. "And if we lose our brucellosis free status because of that, it would just kill the livestock industry."

Shaw said Virginia City and Nevada City continue to draw more and more people to Madison County, and that he is committed to funding the towns further.

"It just gets bigger all the time," he said.

Finally, in the race for commission district 1, three candidates were narrowed to two – Dan Allhands received 41 percent of the vote and moves on to the general election against current commissioner Dave Schulz, who received 39 percent. Eli Thompson received 18 percent of the vote and is out of the running for the seat.

Allhands said he was "pleased" with the results.

"I had a feeling I was going to come out on top, but I knew it was going to be a close race," Allhands said. "I'm just excited to get out and campaign on for the general."

Schulz said he is "encouraged" he is still in the race.

"Until now, I was too busy doing my job to worry about protecting my job," Schulz said. "Going forward, I have every intention of working very hard to maintain the support of the populace and voters of my district to continue doing what I do. I believe I am the best candidate."

Hudson now lives in Norris but is originally from Alder and still considers himself a "Ruby Valley-ite" - he said he enjoys helping with the election process for one simple reason. "The fact it's a free country and we have these elections is important," Hudson said. "It's an honor to be doing it."

ABIGAIL DENNIS/THE MADISONIAN
Polls closed at 8 p.m. on June 7, which is when votes started being tallied at the Madison County Administrative Building.

June 8. "Stream flows generally go up in the afternoon and continue to rise in the evening. That's a good indicator of snowpack melting during the day and then sustaining at night."

Now, however, the stream flows are flattening out, which means the snow is starting to run out.

"From the elevations we measure around Hebgen, there's only 3 percent of snowpack left," Zukiewicz said. "And in the Madison (River Basin) below Hebgen - coming from the Gravellys and Madison ranges, we're at 8 percent."

Normally, that percentage is 35.

"We moved a substantial amount of our snow water early," Zukiewicz said. "That does not mean we did not receive adequate snow during the winter and spring, however."

"Our peak was just slightly below average this year," Zukiewicz said. "So in terms of total volume of snow water we had this year, we did pretty well, especially considering it was an El Nino."

The Ruby

The story is much the same on the other side of Madison County.

"Right now, only 6 percent of snow water is sustaining in the Ruby (River Basin)," Zukiewicz said. "We generally expect to have 33 percent at this date."

The good news is the Ruby Reservoir is full. In fact, Zukiewicz said it is currently spilling.

"But as ag demand on water increases, they will start pulling more water out of the reservoirs," he said. "Usually, we have snow water to keep filling the reservoirs, but we've already moved it this year."

What "hurt" the area was warm, sunny days and nights that did not drop below freezing - those two factors hastened the snowmelt.

According to Zukiewicz, the good news is that June is typically a "wet month" in Southwest Montana.

"We really need to see normal June precipitation to keep stream flows up as the demand on the reservoirs increase," he said. "But as we move into July and August and September, we move into a more typical weather pattern - thunderstorms but not precipitation."

ABIGAIL DENNIS/THE MADISONIAN
Rivers like the Madison, pictured, received the majority of snow water by the beginning of May.

Agencies in Southwest Montana collaborate to keep recreationists safe

editor@madisoniannews.com

“Last year, we had some incidents that occurred on all the rivers in our area, so we knew we needed to do something,” said Gallatin County Sheriff Brian Gootkin, standing on the banks of the Madison River. “We are stronger together.”

Sheriff Gootkin gathered at Black’s Ford fishing access site on June 9 with Madison County Sheriff Roger Thompson, Jefferson County Sheriff Craig Dolittle, Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks warden captain Adam Pankratz and Montana Highway Patrol sergeant Patrick McCarthy to announce a plan for keeping river-goers safe in Southwest Montana.

The goal is having a larger presence at highly-used river recreation areas to prevent drunk driving, underage drinking, depredation of resources and other safety issues.

“The difference this year is you will see more of us,” Sheriff Gootkin said. “We plan to have teams of people on the rivers and at fishing access sites.”

Sheriff Gootkin said the plan also includes interagency cooperation for large events, such as concerts, that happen throughout the summer months.

“Alone, we don’t have the staffing numbers,” Sheriff Gootkin explained.

“We run into a lot of things that are beyond our capacity,” added Pankratz, referring to alcohol consumption, not wearing lifejackets and littering, which are common issues for wardens during the summer. “We run into a lot of things we cannot handle alone.”

In years past, Pankratz said the agencies have always worked together, but with increased use on area rivers and growing populations, the agency leaders thought it was time to be proactive and plan.

“In the past, we have always helped each other,” Sheriff Dolittle clarified. “We want to prevent problems rather than dealing with them after they happen.”

Sheriff Thompson pointed out the “vast majority” of recreationists come out and enjoy the resource responsibly.

“But some are foolish,” he said.

Sheriff Gootkin said the increased presence of law enforcement is not intended to be punitive, it should be helpful.

“Presence is everything,” he said. “When people see us out and about, they will think twice about how they act.”

At the end of the day, the important thing is preserving Southwest Montana’s amenities, while keeping those who enjoy its amenities safe.

“Places like this – the Madison River – are very special,” Pankratz added. “People come here because it’s a great place to recreate and we want to keep it that way.”

Last weekend, Susanne Hill, Erin Leonard, Caitlin Avey and Abigail Dennis made the trek north to Whitefish for the Montana Newspaper Association’s annual conference and awards banquet.

The trip was fruitful – this year, The Madisonian placed first in six divisions and also brought home three second places.

Avey took first for best lifestyle coverage for her feature on the Living History program in Nevada City; the article detailed the hanging of Jack Slade.

Leonard brought back a lot of hardware – she took three first places: best image building ad, best page layout and design and best newspaper promotional ad. So if you need to advertise around Madison County, you know Leonard can help you.

Our whole team also took first place for best niche publication for last year’s summer edition of The Loop.

And finally, we have to give a big shout out to our columnist Keith Axberg, whose wonderful column writing won a first place award!

We received second place accolades for our web site, another feature and a great front page.

We want to thank all of you for supporting the newspaper – we could not do it without all of you.

Will they ever learn?

Dear Editor,

Just thought I would get a shot in before Bob Wagner or his wife start bemoaning his loss and start spanking us with the written word about our great loss not electing Wagner as our representative for House District 71. The extreme right faction of Republican Party believes that their way, the extreme way, is the only way to be a Republican. I beg to differ, Wagner. When I was growing up my mom and dad were active party Republicans. As an adolescent I attended many Republican functions with them. What I saw then and see now is the majority of Republicans are moderates. The majority of Republicans do not buy into extreme conservative ideology. You (and others who share your ideology) call those moderates Democrats. Well, they are not. They are republicans who represent the majority. Just because these other Republicans will not come to your meetings, fill out your infamous surveys or involve themselves in committee work does not mean they are not Republicans. Many of them feel that you and your group have hijacked the local party committee and simply do not want to deal with your extreme ideology. Wagner, if you had driven around Madison County the day that your big survey came out you would have seen every trash can in every post office filled with your unopened surveys that people were not the least bit interested in. Trust me on this: there are not that many Democrats in Madison County. Moderate Republicans pitched them. You fooled the people twice Wagner, I doubt they will ever let you do it again. Ballot crossover voting did not cost you the election twice, your own ideology cost you the election. Moderates are the majority, and always will be. You will never change that. Many will never forget your appearing on national television and making a laughing stock of HD 71 and all of Montana. The voters have spoken.

Under President Trump

Dear Editor,

When Donald Trump becomes presidents of the United States there will be many changes. The White House will be known as the Trump House and it will be painted gold. Air Force One will be known as the Force of Trump and also painted gold.

The first order of business will be to build a big, large, huge wall across the border of the United States and Mexico. But at the same time, Canada will be building a big, large, huge wall across the border of Canada and the United States to keep out the millions of U.S. citizens who will want to immigrate to Canada.

President Trump will set up many new cabinet positions.

1. The Secretary of Women's Affairs, which will relate to concerns of affairs of women past, present and future.

2. Secretary of All Lies, which will become the truth. The truth will be at the decision of the president. Not debatable.

3. Secretary of How the Rich Can Be Out of Paying Taxes, because they are good at this but it can be done better. Trump knows how it is done to his satisfaction.

4. Secretary of How to Use a Bad Word in a most injurious way as not to insult certain people but just the one who deserves to be called a bad word.

5. Secretary of How to Make Fun of Disabled People because we can and protocol is on record as naught.

6. Secretary of the Truth, which will not conflict with the Secretary of All Lies but will be forced to manipulate the upside of the downside without wavering.

7. Secretary of Controversy and Words, which will directly report to the Department of Politically Correct, which will report to the Secretary of "I Do Not Give A Damn"

8. Secretary of Intolerance of others, which will not use the word bigot, sleezeball, freaks, lunatics, nuts or loony unless needed.

All citizens will have to be Trumped, including aliens from some other country or some other planet before the full moon.

OVERCOMING RIVALRIES: BECOMING TEAMMATES

TAMMY WHAM/FOR THE MADISONIAN
Bill Yeager of Twin Bridges and Dustin Wham of Ennis - once rivals, now friends.

Madison County footballers participate in 33rd 'Clev' game

CAITLIN AVEY
news@madisoniannews.com

After four years of rivalry, athletes from Ennis and Twin Bridges stood united in red jerseys.

On June 4, Falcons Kaleb Rosselott, Tracen Eggers, Colby Minert, J.D. Melhoff and Bill Yeager and Mustang powerhouse Dustin Wham lined the Bob Green Field at Montana Tech for one last game, not as opponents but as teammates in the 33rd Bob Cleverly Class C All-Star game.

Bob Cleverley was a football coach for 38 years in Ennis and was instrumental in creating the Bob Cleverley Class C All-Star game, which gives players strictly from class C schools a chance to perform and compete. The "Clev," as it is often referred to, was held on June 4 in Butte.

The "Clev" brought players from across the state together, separated into two divisions; north and east, or the blue team, coached by Wibaux's Jeff Bertlesen and the west and south division, red team, coached by Charlo's Mike Krahn.

"It went really well and the kids played well - we put together a really great package," said Krahn, who led the red team to a 38-16 victory over the blue team.

While the main event of the "Clev" is the big game on Saturday night, athletes spent the entire week practicing, bonding and formulating a team comprised of seasoned competitors.

"The first practice is always pretty sloppy," said Krahn. "The kids haven't played in months and you always think you have a way to go, but those kids are quick learners and after a couple practices we had a pretty great team."

This year marked Krahn's fifth year coaching in the "Clev" game and he said the competition is always tough.

"The toughest part is trying to keep practices from getting too competitive," he joked, adding the players come in "hungry for live action."

Longtime Falcon head coach Rob Lott was unable to attend this year's "Clev" game but said he knew his players would represent the school and county well, something Krahn agreed with.

"The Twin (Bridges) kids are great athletes and have been well coached," Krahn said. "They were easy to work with."

Krahn had similar sentiments about Ennis' Wham.

"(Dustin) did really well ... I got to coach his older brother so I knew some of the history and Ennis always has a some powerhouse kids," he said.

For the players, though they come in hungry to get on the field, the bonding they undergo plays a bigger role than they anticipate.

"Our team bonded really well and it was way more fun than I thought it would be," said Wham, noting his new friendships with the boys from Twin Bridges.

"We've always been on the opposite side of the ball so it was cool to meet the players behind the facemasks," added Yeager. "That was honestly my favorite part. Just hanging out with the team."

Even in his fifth year coaching the "Clev," Krahn said he is always impressed by the transformation of his players.

"I always tell them the best team wins the game, not the best player," he said. "They were a really tight team this year and it's amazing to watch that transformation of enemies to teammates."

COACH OF THE YEAR

Ennis' McKitrick receives award following the team's win at state

ABIGAIL DENNIS
editor@madisoniannews.com

Wendy McKitrick of Ennis was selected as class C boys' track and field coach of the year by members of the Montana Coaches Association.

"It's an honor, but it all goes to the kids," McKitrick said about the recognition. "If they do well, you have a shot at coach of the year. I was just happy and ecstatic for the kids - that's what it's all about."

The Mustang boys' track and field team won the state meet in Missoula the last week of May.

According to Don Olsen, MCA executive director, to be nominated as a coach of the year, said coach must be a member of MCA and either win a state championship or place in the top four in the state of the sport they coach.

"Then the coaches in their classification vote between the top four placers," Olsen said. "(McKitrick) was selected by her peers."

This was McKitrick's fifth year as head track coach for the Mustangs, but her ninth year of involvement with track and field.

"I just love that regardless of what kind of athlete you are, you can improve your times, improve your jumps," she said. "You come together as a team for points, but you are an individual and you learn a lot of life lessons. How to win. How to lose."

This year's Mustang track team - both boys and girls - was an exceptional group of student athletes, McKitrick said.

"They were hard working and would do anything you asked," she said. "They were always ready to compete. They weren't nervous, but were like, 'let's go get this done.'"

McAllister youth given probation

On June 13, a 17-year-old McAllister youth appeared at the Madison County Courthouse before Judge Loren Tucker for a dispositional hearing, essentially, a sentencing.

The charges against the youth stem from an incident that occurred in and around Ennis on Jan. 29 and 30, 2016.

On April 11, The youth pleaded true to the charges of criminal possession of dangerous drugs, criminal possession of drug paraphernalia, minor in possession of alcohol, two instances of theft, criminal mischief and burglary. He pleaded no contest to accountability to criminal mischief.

The charges stem from circumstances that occurred at the end of January 2016 where two Ennis Main Street businesses were broken into and one vandalized; the Ennis Town Pump was deprived of merchandise; and tires were slashed on multiple vehicles on the Ennis golf course.

Before sentencing on June 13, the youth's attorney, William M. Gilbert, called four character witnesses to the stand, who all attested to the youth's remorse about the incident.

Deputy County Attorney Justin Ekwall recommended an extended juvenile disposition, which would allow the youth to remain on probation until he was 25. He also recommended a $5,000 fine, suspended and that the youth complete an alcohol and dangerous drug evaluation and course. Finally, Ekwall said the total amount of restitution owed was $4,329.95 – to cover the damage to the businesses, as well as replace the slashed tires.

Gilbert agreed with the state's recommendation.

Before hearing his sentence, the youth addressed the court.

"Throughout this situation I have been met with forgiveness," he said. "I want to thank everybody who has given me a chance to make this right. I want to apologize to all the victims and the community. I caused a lot of heartache."

Judge Tucker ordered the youth be on probation through youth court until he is 25, with the possibility of terminating that probation when he turns 21 if his probation officer recommends it. He also ordered the youth pay a $500 fine in addition to the $4,329.95 restitution.

The youth plans to work full time during the summer, and his entire monthly paycheck will go toward the restitution payment. In addition, Judge Tucker ordered he continue to pay $50 per month throughout the school year if he does not pay the entire sum by the end of the summer.

Petition to revoke Gill's sentence

Steven Richard Gill appeared at the Madison County Courthouse before Judge Loren Tucker on June 13 on allegations he violated the terms of his probation.

On Sept. 28, 2012, Gill was sentenced to the Department of Corrections for a term of five years, suspended, after he was found guilty of criminal distribution of dangerous drugs, a felony.

Now, the state, represented by Deputy County Attorney Justin Ekwall, alleges Gill violated the terms of that suspended sentence in four ways: he allegedly failed to report to his probation officer; he allegedly changed his place of residence without informing his probation officer; he was allegedly fired from his job and did not seek out employment; and he was allegedly involved in a casino robbery on Jan. 2, 2016.

If found guilty of those violations, Gill faces the remainder of his five year sentence to the DoC and up to a $5,000 fine. Gill entered not true pleas to all allegations and was released back into the custody of the Madison County Sheriff's Office. Judge Tucker continued his $10,000 bond.

Gill's next hearing at the Madison County Courthouse is scheduled for Aug. 8, 2016.

Moose encounter results in death of animal

Ennis town learns of situation; discusses city ordinances

CAITLIN AVEY
news@madisoniannews.com

During their regular monthly meeting, the Ennis town commissioners learned of an unfortunate debacle with a cow moose at the town fishing access that happened last month.

Ennis police chief John Moore notified commissioners of the incident during their June 9 meeting after being asked about encounters with other moose around town.

Shane Brozovich, region three game warden with Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks said Tuesday that the investigation into the moose's death was closed and no citations had been issued.

"It was an unfortunate deal but justified," he said.

A man and his children were on the walking trails by the access site when the moose came out of the brush and charged them.

"The individual had a sidearm and discharged two rounds," Brozovich said, adding the man fired one into the air, hoping to scare the moose and her calf. "He got in front of his kids and sat down on top of them to shield them and fired a second shot."

Kevin Purdy with the Madison Ranger District responded to the scene with a Madison County Sheriff's Office deputy and Brozovich, and pushed the cow and calf out of the access site.

"We were unsure if the moose had been hit when we were pushing (cow and calf) to the east," said Brozovich, adding he attempted to look for wounds on both animals.

The following morning a couple walking their dogs on the trail reported they had come across a dead moose – Brozovich responded and discarded of the body, adding the meat was not salvageable.

"It's a public safety issue and we wanted to get the body off the trail and discarded – the calf is still there, however," Brozovich said, adding the calf was born last year and should be able to survive on its own.

Brozovich suggests to always be aware of moose when recreating, make noise and get out of the area should you cross paths with a moose, especially if they have a calf.

"They're always going to be defensive of their young and protect them as much as they can," he said.

Other news

The commissioners heard from the Ennis Government Review Committee and received their final report.

After spending two years looking into the town's governing charter, the committee recommended the town pass an ordinance requiring all appointed leaders and elected commissioners and to participate in leadership training offered by Montana State University.

Study commission chair Sharon Christensen said she felt obligated to notify the council of their recommendations.

"The charter has served the town well and we felt obligated to report back because we felt strongly enough about our findings," she said during the meeting.

After some slight discussion and encouragement from town attorney James Greenbaum, the commissioners agreed to look into an ordinance requiring mandatory trainings.

The council made some amendments to the fireworks ordinance during their meeting and approved of certain times in which fireworks can be lit.

Newly appointed commissioner Lisa Roberts asked to extend the time period on the night of July 3, and a motion was made by Brian Vincent to extend the time and seconded by Blake Leavitt.

Fireworks within city limits can be lit on July 3, from 3 p.m. to 12:30 a.m., July 4, from 4 p.m. until 12:30 a.m. and Dec. 31, from 5 p.m. until 12:30 a.m.

The council also discussed the parking ordinance, mostly regarding the open lot across from the old IGA on Third Street.

Councilwoman Brandi Palmerton asked if there was a way to establish a boundary in which motorists can and cannot park to help prevent parking in the street and intersection, and the town agreed to look into the idea of painting yellow lines on the property line as well as looking into possible signage.

PET SUCCESS

Oreo: Mr. Independent

CAITLIN AVEY
news@madisoniannews.com

After losing their feline companion, Jennifer Andren and Toby Whalen decided it was time for another four-legged, fuzzy friend. They adopted Oreo, a 1-year-old tuxedo cat who has brought love and laughter back into the family's home.

"He thinks he's a guard dog," said Andren. "He sits in his cat perch and stares out the window and talks to all the outdoor cats."

Oreo is Mr. Independent, according to Andren.

"He has a wonderful personality but he's very independent," she said. "He likes to be loved, but on his terms."

Andren and Whalen rescued

Oreo from a shelter in March and say he has made their lives better.

"When we have a long day, he is always there put a smile on our faces ... I can't explain in words how much he has added to our quality of life," she said.

Though they have worked with breeders before, Andren and Whalen chose adoption for one main reason: saving a life.

"I know there are a lot of qualified breeders but there is something different about adopting, I can't explain it," she said. "It's like they just know that you saved them."

Adopted pets also seem to have a different attitude and a "different way of being," according to Andren, who said Oreo will check on all members of the household to make sure they are "okay."

When he is not busy being a "guard dog" or checking in on his human companions, Andren said Oreo loves to chase golf balls and play.

"We're so thankful to have him," Andren said. "(Adopting) is not only a benefit for the animal but it will change the person doing the adoption's life forever. Adopted animals touch your heart like no other animal can."

WORD on the STREET

During the primary election on June 7, only 47.71 percent of Madison County voters turned out, so we at The Madisonian took to the streets of Madison County to see why or why not our residents chose to vote. Here's what we found out.

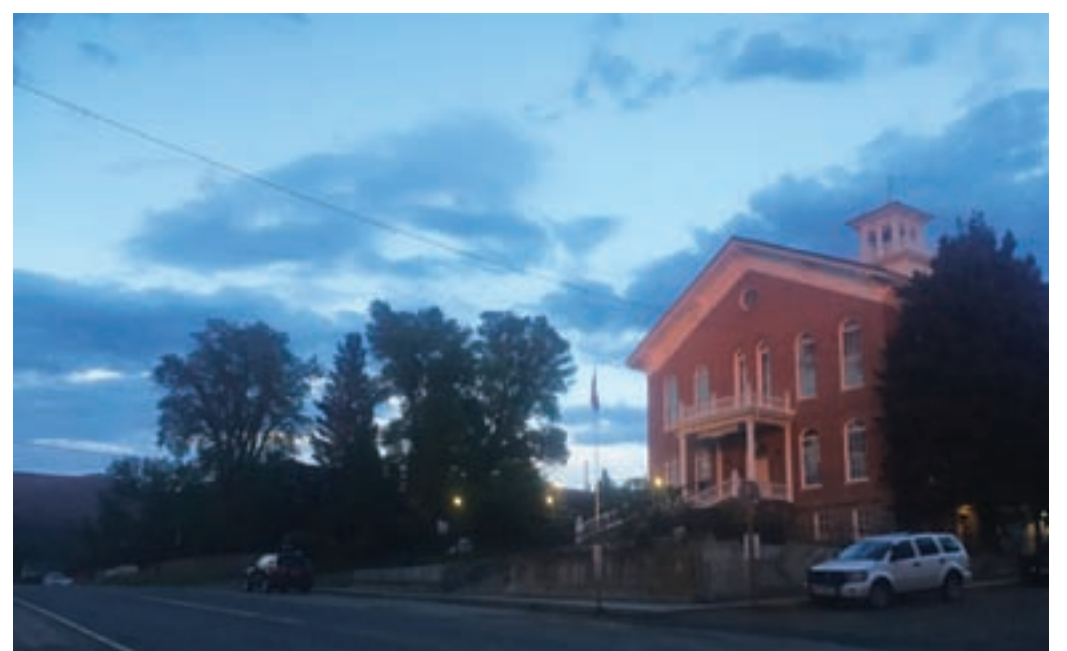

"I voted - I was more concerned about our local outcome than anything. I think it's the right thing to do."
- Mark Pedersen, Twin Bridges

"I voted because I think it's important. We have the right to vote and how can you complain if you don't go and vote?"
- Kathy Barnes, Ennis

"I voted because I want to have a voice in who is representing us. It's a privilege, not a right and I think there are a lot of young people in our county that just don't care."
- Dave Marsh, Sheridan

"I didn't not vote but I am registered - I was busy at work and it just slipped my mind. I do try to vote in the local elections but I'm not going to bother when it comes to the national election this year."
- Terri Stubbs, Ennis

"I voted because I think it's the right thing to do."
- "Rozy" Rosenthal, Virginia City

HEALTH & WELLNESS

Common myths and shocking truths

SUBMITTED BY STATEPOINT

With all the attention paid to health and wellness these days, it is no wonder that probiotics are such a hot topic. Probiotics support digestive health and strong immunity (70 percent of our immune system is located in the digestive tract); however, there are a lot of myths surrounding them.

With the global probiotic market expected to climb to $36.7 billion in 2018, according to BCC Research, consumers should get the truth about how to reap probiotic benefits before shelling out their money.

Here are a few myths and facts to consider:

Myth: If a yogurt product has the Live and Active Cultures seal on the label, it is "probiotic."

Fact: The seal indicates that at the time of manufacture, a refrigerated yogurt contained at least 100 million cultures of Lactobacillus bulgaricus and Streptococcus thermophilus per gram, and that a frozen yogurt contained at least 10 million cultures per gram at the time of manufacture. This sounds pretty impressive, but depending on storage conditions, cultures used and other manufacturing processes, there may be only a small fraction of the cells left by the time the product reaches your spoon, due to their naturally short lifespan.

The good news is there are products that contain far more robust cultures. For example, GadenBC30 (Bacillus coagulans GBI-30, 6086), a strain of probiotic bacteria, survives at rates of nearly 100 percent, and can be found in a variety of food and beverage products. Be sure to check the ingredient listing or look for its circular logo on packaging.

Myth: Fermented foods like kimchi, sauerkraut, miso and natto are good sources of probiotics.

Fact: It depends. While many of these foods do use naturally occurring live cultures to begin fermentation, the pasteurization process will kill almost all living bacteria, even the good guys.

If the fermented product is raw, meaning it was never pasteurized, it will contain bacteria, but it will not necessarily be probiotic. The organisms used to produce the fermented food have not always been studied – so whether they provide a health benefit to the consumer is unknown.

Myth: Added probiotic strains cannot survive in foods and beverages outside of the refrigerated dairy case.

Fact: Some strains can. Its stability is due to a unique protective spore that gives the probiotic an ability to survive harsh manufacturing processes, product shelf life and, finally, the journey through the digestive system.

These special characteristics allow it to be included in foods like oatmeal, muffins, coffee, orange juice and even pizza – providing probiotic options that fit every lifestyle and preference.

When seeking out good sources of probiotics to include in your diet, remember to do research beyond the label.

3 ways to improve your healthy routines

SUBMITTED BY STATEPOINT

When you feel strong nothing can hold you back. From building your muscles to strengthening your mind and conditioning your body, every day you strive towards looking and feeling healthy in the truest sense.

Here are some tips that will help to improve your long-term health.

Amp up your workout

Do not let your workout routine get stale. Mix up your regularly scheduled program to work different muscles and ward off workout boredom.

Take time to regularly evaluate your fitness regimen and make sure you are spending enough time on improving your endurance, strength and flexibility.

For instance, training for a big race? Shave a few miles from your long run and supplement it with a bike ride. And, switch up non-cardio days with a barre, yoga or Pilates class.

Also, do not forget to carve out time to warm up with dynamic stretches before your workout and deep stretches afterward. Get out a foam roller to stretch and massage your muscles to keep them limber. Using a foam roller will help to increase the range in motion of your muscles, which can help prevent injuries during future workouts.

Smile with strength

Oral health is an essential part of staying healthy in the long-term. Strengthening and repairing your enamel from everyday wear and tear can be part of your daily personal health routine.

Similar to how moisturizing lotions and conditioners replenish skin and hair, by brushing with toothpaste twice daily, you can help strengthen weakened enamel by replenishing it with vital minerals. This toothpaste replenishes natural calcium and other minerals back into weakened enamel, for stronger, healthy enamel.

Fuel your body

Give your body the fuel and energy it needs to keep you strong and healthy.

Start each morning with a breakfast full of nutrients and protein to set a good tone for the rest of the day. Make your mornings easier with simple tricks like preparing overnight oats the night before so you have no excuses to skip this crucial meal.

Stick to a healthy eating plan with meal planning. Prepare as many lunches and dinners for the week as you can on Sunday, before work and family obligations get in the way.

Look to fill those meals with a balance of lean meats and proteins, legumes, fruits and vegetables and healthy grains like brown rice and quinoa.

A healthy balanced diet will improve your energy level throughout the day and during workouts. You should also make sure that you are hydrating post-workout with water, or for an extra hydration boost, try coconut water.

When you amp up these aspects of your overall routine your body will feel the difference and you will see the difference. Follow these tips and you will feel stronger than ever.

A WORLD-WHIRLING AFFLICTION

Putting a technique from a misspent youth to good use

I first noticed something was amiss when I began experiencing lightheadedness. After a while, if I made a quick head movement, it seemed to take a second or two for my brain to catch up. In my case, that alone is not normally a cause for concern. Shortly, however, I also developed an upset stomach and began staggering around my house. Having recently heard a friend who had endured a bout of vertigo describe her symptoms, I was pretty sure what the problem was. When my symptoms worsened, I bashed through the bedroom door and fairly flopped onto the bed.

Art Kehler

Regrettably, no sooner had my head hit the pillow than the vertigo deviously transformed into – horizontigo. The bed began spinning violently in a clockwise direction. Next, the entire room began swirling. Lastly, it seemed like the fact that I was doggedly hanging onto my bed was the only thing keeping the earth from flying off its axis.

Luckily, I was able to draw on hard-learned experience gained earlier in my life, when I imbibed motor-skills-impairing beverages to excess. While still clutching the mattress with a death grip, I extended my left leg from the bed and pressed my foot against the floor at a counter-clockwise tilt. Just seconds before my toes collapsed from fatigue, the world stopped whirling.

Then, to my grave disappointment, the bed began spinning in a counterclockwise direction (the dreaded reverse-horizontigo). At that point, I withdrew my left leg, extended my right leg and pushed that foot against the floor at a clockwise slant. After what seemed an eternity, the tried and true technique of my misspent youth worked and the world stilled enough to allow me to fall asleep. The following morning, however, the instant I lifted my head, all the symptoms returned with a vengeance.

The next day at the doctor's office, I was given some pills to take. Also, I was instructed to drink 64 ounces of water per day from then on. I protested that in order to achieve that, my body's fluid depository would have to swell to the size of a beach ball. Nevertheless, I was exhorted to hydrate-hydrate-hydrate! Of course the other side of the equation required that I also irrigate-irrigate-irrigate!

That night, during my fifth frenzied sprint to the bathroom, I only knocked over one piece of furniture. Hence, I realized the vertigo/horizontigo spin-velocity was lessening. Furthermore, filling it with water had settled my churning stomach somewhat. Sure enough, three days later, the good doctor's instructions proved to be spot on and I was well enough to resume social interaction.

Consequently, I drove up to the local café. To avoid any involuntary collisions, I forewarned the staff to give me a wide berth because I was still more unbalanced than normally. Admittedly, I was a little offended at their reply that it was impossible for me to be any dizzier than I already am. Wounded though I was, I patiently explained that the physical dizziness I was suffering is a serious medical condition, whereas my mental dizziness is a precondition for happiness.

Surprisingly, my experience with vertigo did have a few positive outcomes. For one thing, having revisited symptoms similar to those caused by drinking alcohol to excess inspired me to remain a teetotaler. Additionally, I discovered that one cannot drown from drinking too much water. Nevertheless, there's no denying vertigo, in either its vertical or horizontal form, is a world-whirling affliction; especially for someone who's already prone to be dizzy.

THE ART OF CATCH AND RELEASE FISHING

In Montana, the general stream fishing season kicked off on May 21, and with that an abundance of anglers have taken to the waterways. After my own recent fishing excursion and the hot days, I thought this was a good time to remind everyone to check fishing regulations for the streams and lakes you're fishing, and to remind everyone to practice proper catch and release techniques for fish you'll be putting back in the water.

Catch-and-release fishing has been an important part of recreational angling for many decades, as anglers have come to value many fish species more for their sporting qualities than as table fare, and to protect some species of concerns. With the addition of catch and release only seasons on some of our streams, anglers fishing those waters have to practice catch and release if they want to enjoy those opportunities.

The purpose of catch and release angling is to allow fish to survive so anglers can catch them again or so the fish can live to reproduce. The species of fish, water temperature and angler behavior affect the success of catch and release fishing. Trout species are most susceptible to angling mortality.

Sport-caught fish typically die during catch and release because of wounding and/or stress. The use of proper equipment and careful handling can keep this to a minimum.

Here is what anglers can do to maximize fish survival:

- Land the fish quickly and do not play it to exhaustion.
- Wet your hands before handling the fish.
- Keep the fish in the water as much as possible where its gills can absorb oxygen.
- Minimize the time out of water for photos.
- Remove the hook gently. Use of artificial lures, single and barbless hooks can make hook removal faster and easier. If you are hooking the fish correctly, there is no need for a barb on your hook!

Let the fish recover before release. If the fish is hooked deeply or bleeding, you may have to snip the line at the fish's mouth, or consider keeping it if regulations allow.

- Consider limiting your catch. Even with catch and release, fish are stressed and some will die.

The absolute most important thing is to repeat the mantra, "Don't forget – keep them wet." Keeping fish wet is the number one reduction to stress.

Fish caught in the lips, jaws, mouth roofs or cheeks are more easily released than those that are more deeply hooked – say in the gullet or in the gills. Anglers who use artificial lures generally hook fish more superficially than those using live bait. When a fish takes bait, it may swallow it immediately, which can lead to gut- or gill-hooking. If a fish has swallowed a hook, cut the line and leave it. The hook will generally deteriorate over time and the fish has a better chance of survival than if its organs are torn in the unhooking process. Hooks should be removed quickly; needle-nose pliers or hemostats allow anglers to release fish with minimal handling. Simply grasp the hook with the tool, hold the fish in or over the water and twist the hook to remove it.

If you wish to photograph the fish before you release it, please handle it carefully. Wet your hands before handling a fish to prevent removing the protective mucus (aka slime) from the fish. Make sure you support the fish properly, cradling its belly, while holding it; do not squeeze the fish. For larger fish, a net or gloves may help you hold on to them while removing the hook. Do not let the fish batter itself against the boat or the ground.

When releasing a fish, slide it gently back into the water. If the fish appears stressed, hold it in the water and gently move it back and forth to force water through the gills. This will help to revitalize it. If you are in a river, face the fish into the current – but avoid extremely fast-moving water.

WRITING the WIND TOBACCO ROOT WRITERS

Writing the wind is a series of six short stories, written by women who are passionate about telling true stories from Madison County.

In this installment a young ranch girl milks her first cow.

Dad's rules

By Julie Maddison

My family lives by two rules – we pray together and we work together.

Dad leans against the kitchen sink in a denim shirt with the sleeves rolled up to the elbows revealing large freckled fore arms. "It's time you learned how to milk the cow," he says, nodding his head toward me. "You're big enough now to carry the bucket."

On our way to the barn, Dad explains his rules for milking before leaving me on my own. "Rule number one: Give the cow time to rest and chew her cud before milking; otherwise, the milk will taste bitter."

Betsy, our cow, is out to pasture so I call to her, "Come boss." The request soon becomes a song, "Coo ba, coo ba, coo ba." She rises slowly and eventually ambles towards the barn, an old log structure propped up on cottonwood blocks. A pole corral joins the barn on the east and an irrigation ditch oozes under a makeshift bridge before the gate. Betsy thinks it safer to plod through the muck rather than take the bridge. Her hooves suck the mud like a plunger in a clogged sink. She stays in the corral contentedly chewing her cud until the sun is setting behind the Ruby Mountains.

I swing wide the door. "Come Boss," I coo. Betsy swishes her tail; its soggy tuff upsets a cloud of flies that hover momentarily before settling back on her twitching hide. "Come Betsy."

She pulls to her feet as I scoop a Folgers can full of oats and dump them into the stanchion. Gnarled hooves clomp up the planks leading from the corral and thud across the floor kicking up dusty manure. Betsy flicks her tail as she passes me popping me square in the seat of my overalls. "Dang it Bets! Did you do that on purpose?" Spider-leg lashes over brown eyes blink her innocence. Her long ears pull back as she pushes her black and white face into the buttress, and her tongue licks at the treat. "Good girl," I say as I slam the restraint against her neck and bang the wooden latch into place.

The aroma of cow, warm milk and digesting alfalfa engulfs the shed. "Easy girl!" I soothe, patting her haunches with one hand and brushing the crust from her bag with the other. I remove a one-legged stool and a galvanized bucket from pegs on the wall. Assuming the milking position, I squat on the stool tipping forward and pinch the pail tightly between my knees following Dad's Rule number two: "Never allow the milk pail to touch the floor. Your mother does not allow sh-- in her kitchen." I press my head into Betsy's flank and begin the squeeze-pull, squeeze-pull rhythm on her teats.

Pinging milk plays reveille to an array of cats that come down the ladder from the loft. Yawning and stretching, they line up behind the cow. I heed Dad's rule number three: "Don't squirt milk at the cats. That's only done in the movies." But they wouldn't be there if Dad didn't break his own rule once in a while.

Chore complete, I rise, catching the stool in one hand and lugging the bucket in the other. The stool goes back on its hook and I answer the clamor of the cats who race to the battered pan where I pour their ration. The bucket goes back on its peg, and I feel proud that it's free of manure.

Betsy tugs impatiently at the stanchion. "Quiet Bets," I coo as I let her free.

She has a habit of leaving cow slaps like greasy stepping stones as she leaves. Dad's rule number four cautions: "Clean up all cow pies before you can say your job is finished."

I grab a shovel to catch the mess as Betsy lets it fly. Plop, plop, plop the piles fall into the scoop. Quick as lightning she slams the shovel with a hind hoof sending the steaming goo splattering down upon me. "Dang it, Betsy," I cry. "You did that on purpose!"

I enter the house and offer the pail to Mom. "You won't find a single drop of cow poo on or in the bucket," I brag.

Mom chortles, "Where'd you get those green freckles!?" She wipes her hands on her apron and takes the pail. "Better leave your clothes on the back porch before you take a shower."

Smelling my green hair, I add my own rule: number five, "Never pick up manure before it lands," and that's how I became my family's 8-year-old milkmaid.

Commodity Insite! The Algo Boys are back!

by Jerry Welch

In early June, Chinese stock-index futures fell the daily limit, down as much as 10 percent but suddenly snapped back with a vengeance in less than a minute. A similar bout of intense volatility occurred two weeks earlier with stock futures in the Hong Kong markets. The unexplained 10 percent collapse in 60 seconds is being investigated by Chinese officials that were puzzled about how such a bout of unexpected weakness could unfold.

Last week in the United States livestock futures market, cattle futures fell $800 per futures contract in five seconds. The trading range that day was larger than the entire range of the previous week. But two days later, cattle futures reversed course, rallied back sharply and recovered all that was lost following that unexplained $800 per contract collapsed that took place in only five seconds.

No doubt investors, traders and agricultural producers across the globe are wringing their hands about the intense volatility gripping the entire Big Four: stocks, bonds, currencies and commodities. In particular the commodity futures markets have been especially wild and crazy and definitely not for the faint of heart or the under margined.

The cause of the volatility is clear. The vicious price swings are the direct result of the commodity funds, a.k.a. the Algo Boys and the high frequency traders. What has unfolded in the commodity markets is similar to what I wrote about in June 2013 in a column entitled, "Algo Trading." Here are a few of my comments from three years ago:

"I continue to moan and groan about high frequency traders and the impact they are having across the board. In fact, they had their way this week with both a popular commodity and a high profile stock. Let's start with the commodity and I will quote what one of my favorite groups, F.C. Stone had to say a few days ago.

"Yesterday's cattle session was perfect evidence of how electronic order flow and Algo traders are having an increased impact on our ag markets. August live cattle futures traded quietly steady for the first 90 minutes before rallying literally $1.25 in a matter of about 10 seconds. Once the stop orders and computerized order flow subsided, futures settled down and closed well off those mid-morning highs."

F.C. Stone used the slang expression, Algo for algorithm trading, which is nothing more than high-speed computers buying or selling stocks or commodities in fractions of a second. Here is the Wikipedia definition of algorithms: 'In mathematics and computer science an algorithm is a step-by-step procedure for calculations. Algorithms are used for calculations, data processing and automated reasoning.' What Wikipedia failed to mention is that algorithms are now used for high speed trading as well."

In the article, "Algo Trading" I went on to state, "The day after Algo traders had their way with cattle futures, they did the same with the stock or shares of Facebook Inc. From Market Watch. com: 'Facebook stock jumped almost a dollar a share in three seconds Wednesday afternoon, according to Eric Hunsader, CEO of Nanex, a provider of real-time data to traders. In the three seconds starting at 3:33:54 p.m., the social networking company's stock increased from $24.40 a share to $25.19 a share, before quickly dropping back down to $24.40 a share. There were two million shares traded in Facebook during the three seconds, he added."

I also wrote: "To fully grasp what it is like to hear that two million shares of a stock were traded in three seconds by the Algo Boys consider this. In 1953, less than one million shares of stock were traded on any one day at the New York Stock Exchange. The difference between what took place 60 years ago in the stock market compared to today, is surreal."

Near the end of my column from three years ago I wrote the following: "Going forward, whenever you experience any market, stocks, bonds, currencies or a commodity that moves with the speed of light, leaving you breathless and a tad lighter in the wallet, rest assured it is Algo trading, high frequency trading once again rearing its head."

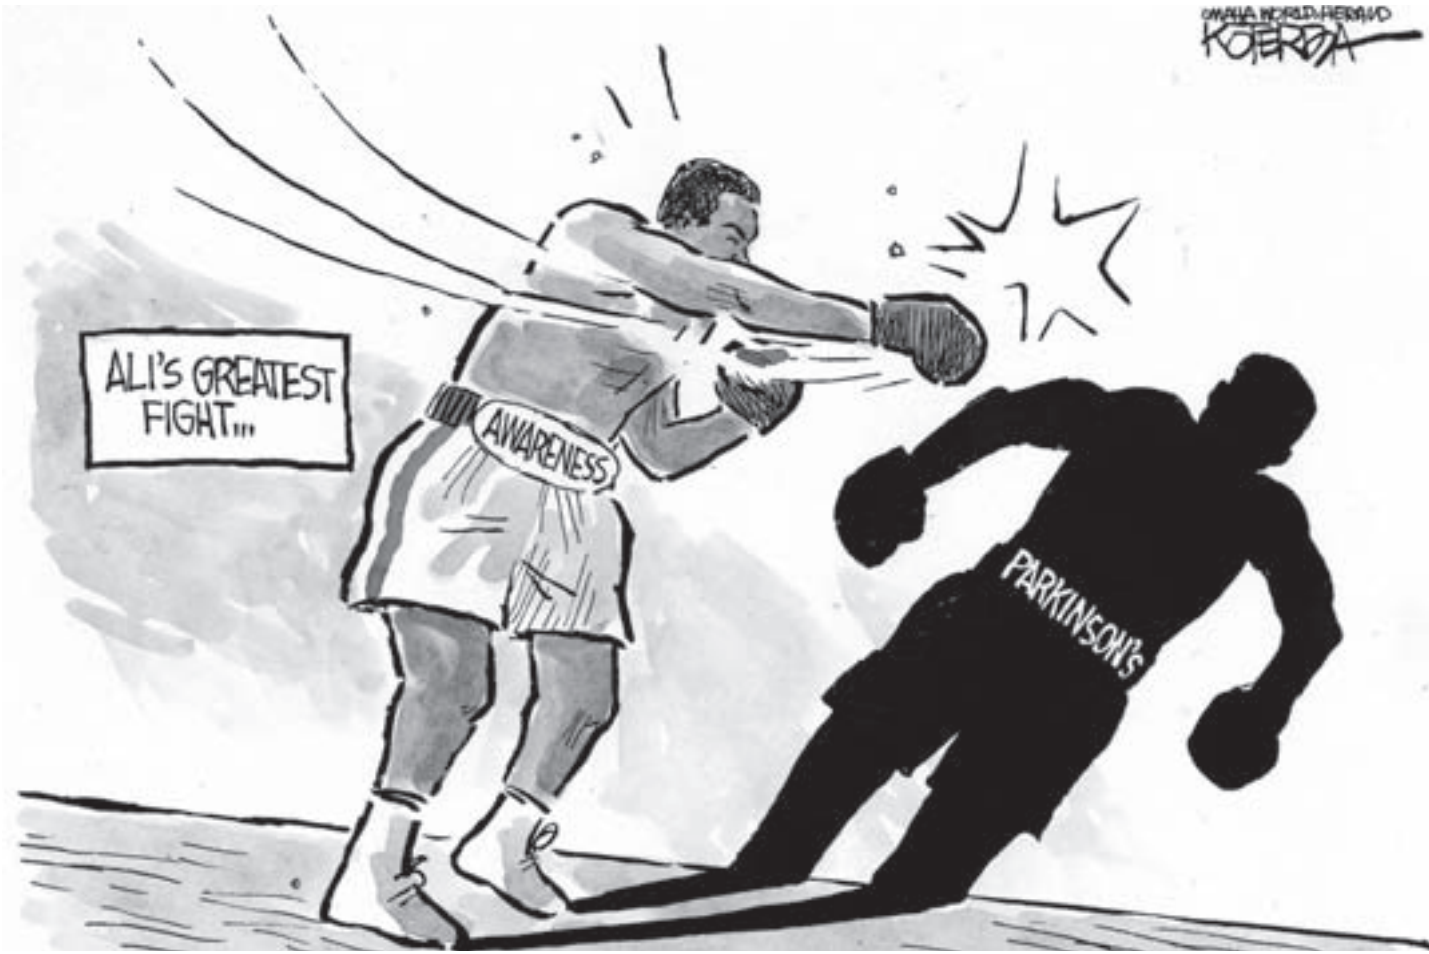

And that is the explanation I offer for the wild and crazy price swings taking place in China, the U.S. and across the globe this very moment. Simply put, Algo trading and the high frequency trading funds are back at it.

Understand there are no good or bad guys here. I am only explaining the cause of the volatility and nothing else. I am not trying to pass judgment on their activities. But it is very clear. The reemergence of the Algo boys and the HFT funds has sparked the largest rally with commodities in eight months. After declining for a record five years in a row, it seems the odds are high that hard assets in general will post a year-over-year gain. For agricultural producers, that is great news because selling into a rising market is far more profitable than selling into a declining market.

Assuming, of course, the price gains can be maintained into year end. But that remains to be seen.

To file a complaint of discrimination, write USDA, Director, Office of Civil Rights, 1400 Independence Avenue, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20250-9410, or call (800)795-3272 (voice) or (202)720-6382 (TTY). well's: Well #1 at 100 feet, Well #2 at 225 feet, Well #3 at 400 feet, Well #4 at 412 feet and Well #5 at 450 feet. These wells supply water for a 300,000-gallon storage tank that serves approximately 900 customers.
We're pleased to report that our drinking water is safe and meets federal and state requirements.
If you have any questions about this report or concerning your water, please contact Curtis Green 406-865-0379. You may also attend any of our regularly scheduled meetings. They are held on the second Monday of each month at 6:00pm at the Town Hall, 103 E. Hamilton Street in Sheridan.
The Town of Sheridan routinely monitors for constituents in your drinking water according to Federal and State laws. The following table shows the results of any detects in our monitoring for the period of January 1st to December 31st, 2015. For constituents that are not monitored yearly, we have reviewed our records back to the last time the constituent was monitored.
We have monitored for lead and copper, and 90% or more of our samples have been in compliance with the Lead and Copper Rule (see box A below)
In the tables above and below you will find many terms and abbreviations you might not be familiar with.
To help you better understand these terms we've provided the following definitions:
Parts per billion (ppb) or Micrograms per liter (ug/l) - one part per billion corresponds to one minute in 2000 years or a single penny in $10,000,000.
Parts per million (ppm) or Milligrams per liter (mg/l) - one part per million corresponds to one minute in two years or a single penny in $10,000.
Action Level - the concentration of a contaminant, which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements, which a water system must follow.
Treatment Technique (TT) - A treatment technique is a required process intended to reduce the level of a contaminant in drinking water.
Maximum Contaminant Level - The "Maximum Allowed" (MCL) is the highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology. Maximum Contaminant Level Goal - The "Goal"(MCLG) is the level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.
Nephelometric Turbidity Unit (NTU)-nephelometric turbidity unit is a measure of the clarity of water. Turbidity in excess of 5 NTU is just noticeable to the average person.
Picocuries per liter (pCi/L)-picocuries per liter is a measure of the radioactivity in water.
(see box B below)
All sources of drinking water are subject to potential contamination by constituents that are naturally occurring or are man made. Those constituents can be microbes, organic or inorganic chemicals, or radioactive materials.
Violations- We failed to provide to you, our drinking water customers, in 2010 and 2014 the results of lead tap water monitoring to the consumers at the location water was tested. These were supposed to be provided no later than 30 days after learning the results. The violation ended in 2015.
Copper: Copper is an essential nutrient, but some people who drink water containing copper in excess of the action level over a relatively short amount of time could experience gastrointestinal distress. Some people who drink water containing copper in excess of the action level over many years could suffer liver or kidney damage. People with Wilson's Disease should consult their personal doctor.
Lead: Infants and children who drink water containing lead in excess of the action level could experience delays in their physical or mental development. Children could show slight deficits in attention span and learning abilities. Adults who drink this water over many years could develop kidney problems or high blood pressure.

If present, elevated levels of Lead can cause serious health problems, especially for pregnant women and young children. Lead in drinking water is primarily from materials and components associated with service lines and home plumbing. The Town of Sheridan is responsible for providing high quality drinking water, but cannot control the variety of materials used in plumbing components. When your water has been sitting for several hours, you can minimize the potential for lead exposure by flushing your tap for 30 seconds to 2 minutes before using water for drinking or cooking. If you are concerned about the lead in drinking water, testing methods and steps you can take to minimize exposure is available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline or at http://www.epa.gov/safewater/lead.
Nitrates: As a precaution we always notify physicians and health care providers in this area if there is ever a higher than normal level of nitrates in the water supply.
THMs [Total Trihalomethanes]: Some people who drink water that contains trihalomethanes in excess of the MCL over many years may experience problems with their liver, kidneys, or central nervous systems, and may have an increased risk of getting cancer.
Uranium- Some people who drink water containing uranium in excess of the MCL over many years have increased risk of getting cancer and kidney toxicity.
We're proud that your drinking water meets or exceeds all Federal and State requirements. We have learned through our monitoring and testing that some constituents have been detected. The EPA has determined that your water IS SAFE at these levels.
All drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that the water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1-800-426-4791.
MCLs are set at very stringent levels. To understand the possible health effects described for many regulated constituents, a person would have to drink 2 liters of water every day at the MCL level for a lifetime to have a one-in-a-million chance of having the described health effect.
Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population.
Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by cryptosporidium and other microbiological contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).
We ask that all our customers help us protect our water sources, which are the heart of our community, our way of life and our children's future.

The beneficiary has declared the Grantor in default of the terms of the Deed of Trust and the Promissory Note ("Note") secured by said Deed of Trust due to Grantor's failure to timely pay all monthly installments of principal, interest and if applicable, escrow reserves for taxes and/or insurance as required by the Note and Deed of Trust. The default for which foreclosure is made is grantor's failure to pay when due the following sums: monthly payments of $2,961.66 beginning January 1, 2015 through June 17, 2016; plus interest due of $7,576.94; plus escrow payment of $1,758.29; together with title expense, costs, trustee's fees and attorney's fees incurred herein by reason of said default; any further sums advanced by the beneficiary for the protection of the above described real property and its interest therein; and prepayment penalties/premiums, if applicable. Due to the defaults stated above, the Beneficiary has elected and has directed the Trustee to sell the above-described property to satisfy the obligation. Notice is further given that any person named has the right, at any time prior to the date last set for the sale, to have this foreclosure proceeding dismissed and the Deed of Trust reinstated by making payment to the Beneficiary of the entire amount then due (other than such portion of the principal as would not then be due had no default occurred) and by curing any other default complained of herein that is capable of being cured by tendering the performance required under the obligation or to cure the default, by paying all costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligation and Deed of Trust, together with Successor Trustee's and attorney's fees. If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Successor Trustee and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. Birding and geology at Lewis & Clark Caverns

SUBMITTED BY TOM FORWOOD
Lewis & Clark Caverns State Park

On Friday, June 17 at 8 p.m., please join us at Lewis & Clark Caverns State Park and our guest Kaleb Scarberry for a special program on the highly sought-after natural riches of the Boulder Batholith that provided the booming variety of minerals that put Butte on the map. The program will gather at the campground amphitheater.

Scarberry is an associate research geologist and museum curator for the Montana Bureau of Mines and Geology. Earlier in his career, he served as a professor of geology for Colorado State University and Central Washington University.

Lewis & Clark Caverns State Park will celebrate our eighth annual birding day on Saturday June 18. Assistant park manager Tom Forwood will meet with interested participants at 8 a.m. at the park's main (lower) visitor center. The birding day is a celebration of the park's bird diversity that ventures into the park's major bird habitat types. We will begin on the park road before traffic starts for the day and then venture to areas from the banks Jefferson River to the cave trail below the cliffs of cave mountain. Despite the area covered, the total walking is little more than 2 miles with less than 400 feet elevation gained. Please bring binoculars, a snack, water, good footwear, transportation (carpooling is encouraged) and an enthusiasm for the park's avian species.

Insecticide spraying at some campgrounds

SUBMITTED BY LEONA RODREICK
Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest

The Forest Service will be applying insecticides in recreation sites throughout the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest over the next few weeks. The need for this is driven by the current mountain pine beetle epidemic, which has heavily affected many areas throughout southwest Montana and has already impacted some individual trees within popular recreation areas.

Beginning mid-June and continuing through mid-July depending upon the weather, a Forest Service workforce and contract sprayers will be placing packets, SPLAT and spraying Carbaryl to protect individual pine trees from mountain pine beetles in recreation sites in Madison County specifically:

- Mill Creek Campground
- Potosi Campground

Sites marked with () will not be closed but will have packets or SPLAT placed on trees to reduce impacts from bark beetles.

DRUG TAKE BACK EVENT | JUNE 16TH FROM 4 P.M. TO 7 P.M. MADISON VALLEY MEDICAL CENTER, DURING THE HEALTH FAIR

GOT LEFTOVER MEDICINE?

Before storing it, flushing it, or throwing it out with the trash, READ THIS.

For your safety. And for your family's.

- Every 14 minutes, an American dies from an unintentional drug overdose.
- Seven out of 10 people who abuse prescription drugs get them from friends or family members.
- Among children, emergency room visits for accidental drug poisonings are twice as common as poisonings for other household products (e.g., cleaning solutions).
- Flushing leftover medicines sends them into our rivers, streams, and waterways because wastewater treatment plants are not designed to remove them.
- Studies have found antibiotics, anti-seizure medicines, mood stabilizers, and sex hormones in drinking water across the U.S.
- While the long-term human health effects of repeated exposure to low levels of these chemicals are not yet known, the effects on marine life are well-documented and include serious harm to fish populations.

Don't flush! Empty your medicine cabinet in a safer, healthier, and more environmentally responsible way.
