Madison County Clerk and Recorder discovers discrepancy in district boundary

ABIGAIL DENNIS editor@madisoniannews.com

Last week, a question from a voter about whether or not a residence was located in the Sheridan or Twin Bridges school district, made Madison County Clerk and Recorder and Election Administrator Kathleen Mumme pause.

"On Monday, Aug. 29, I was looking into a question from a voter involving her family's residency," Mumme said. "I determined that a candidate for commission district one, Daniel W. Allhands, may actually be residing in commission district two."

Mumme immediately started looking at maps, surveys, the state cadastral overlay and voter registration cards to get to the bottom of the question, and notified Madison County Attorney Chris Christensen. Mumme also notified Allhands - The Madisonian reached out to Allhands for comment but did not hear back by press time Tuesday.

How it happened

Commission district boundaries have followed precinct lines for many years, with one exception.

"(There are) statutory requirements that commission districts be as even as possible in population and reviewed for this after every federal census which, of course, is every 10 years," Mumme said. "This is why commission districts have changed a bit over the years."

However, the boundary line in question, between commission district one, which includes Virginia City, Alder, Sheridan and a portion of rural Ennis, and commission district two, which includes Twin Bridges, Jefferson Island and Harrison, has not changed.

What it means for the election

The Montana general election ballot, and therefore Madison County's, was certified by Aug. 26, Mumme said.

Therefore, as far as I know now, no changes can be made to it," she added. "I so wish this problem could have been resolved long before the primary election, but, unfortunately, it was

"There's not a problem, necessarily," Christensen said. "It is not up to the county attorney or the election administrator to determine eligibility."

Eligibility is determined through a judicial process, Christensen explained. Hypothetically, if Allhands wins the race, any qualified elector can file a complaint in District Court, and the judge will determine if Allhands is qualified to hold the position.

"And then, if he is determined to be ineligible, what happens is the sitting county commissioners (from district two and district three) appoint a commissioner," Christensen explained.

Get to know your bear neighbors

More than 50 people gather in Alder for talk on bear behavior, safety

FWP holds community meeting in Ennis to discuss the future of Madison River recreation

"Bears are all around us," said Rebecca Ramsey, Ruby Watershed Coordinator, opening a talk about bears on Sept. 1 at the Alder Fire Hall. "We need to know our neighbors ... not only human, but wildlife."

More than 50 people gathered at the fire hall to learn about bear behavior, how to avoid encounters and what to do if an encounter happens.

Danielle Oyler, bear education coordinator for the Southwest Montana Bear Education Working Group, kicked off the presentation explaining it is a misconception that black bears are not as dangerous as grizzly bears.

"Both can be a safety risk," Oyler said. "Avoiding a conflict is much easier than dealing with one."

Oyler asked those assembled to raise their hands if they have ever seen a bear - nearly everyone responded in the affirmative. She then asked those who had seen a grizzly bear to keep their hands up. Most hands stayed in the air.

"One reason we're gathering is because grizzly bear habitat has expanded - is expanding," she said.

This summer, a grizzly bear was spotted in the Upper Big Hole for the first time in nearly a century.

On Aug. 29, more than 70 people, interested in recreation on the Madison River, converged on the Ennis School lunch room to discuss the future of the river, pertaining to potential social conflict, congestion and crowding, with Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks.

"This is the community that is most effective and most affective on this river system," said FWP Region Three Supervisor Sam Sheppard. "This conversation started in 2012 and was shelved for a variety of reasons. We need to start the conversation again."

Sheppard was referring to the fact that FWP formed a citizen advisory council in early 2012 to discuss whether or not FWP needs to implement a river recreation plan for the Upper Madison River.

The Ennis meeting was one of three FWP held last week ¬- community members showed up to discuss the river in Bozeman and West Yellowstone as well.

FWP officials broke the attendees into six small groups to answer a difficult question about two sections of the Upper Madison - from Lyons Bridge to Ennis, and from Hebgen Dam to Lyons Bridge.

The question

Everyone in attendance received the same question:

"Because of concerns about congestion, crowding and social conflict, have we come to a point in time where there is a need for FWP to regulate when and where the public or river service providers can recreate on this stretch of the river, or the types of recreation that are allowed on this stretch of the river? If yes, why? If no, why not?"

The first stretch the groups discussed – from Lyon Bridge to Ennis – brought a variety of answers.

'We want to know what you guys see between Lyons Bridge and Ennis," said Cheryl Morris, FWP representative leading one small group. "We've been hearing both sides of it."

After allowing the small groups time to converse, the large group reconvened and the FWP representatives shared their group's answers.

"On the yes side, there is season crowding with boats, too much pressure, a decrease in catch rate, a decrease in river ethics," Morris reported. "For no, the river is self-regulating and the fishery is healthy - there are actually bigger fish and more fish. You don't have to be near boats."

What are the facts?

"We need to define congesting, crowding and social conflict," said outfitter John Way during his small group session. "We need data. A restrictive plan would not be embraced by the business and river community until those are defined."

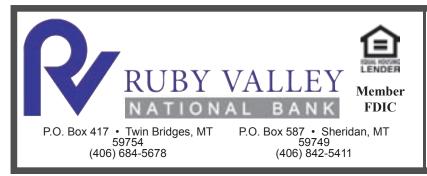

In another small group, outfitter Brian Rosenberg tackled the question about whether or not it is time to regulate the river between Hebgen Dam and Lyons Bridge.

"I've been here 17 years," he said. "I've never been in a fight; I don't see screaming and yelling matches when I'm (on the river) recreationally and commercially."

Rosenberg said he believes etiquette and ethics need to be taken seriously, instead of telling people how they can or cannot use parts of the river.

Leonard, Hill start West Yellowstone newspaper

After door closes on West Yellowstone News, The Madisonian publishers found the Star

Last month, the West Yellowstone News, an award-winning weekly based in West Yellowstone, announced Big Sky Publishing would no longer publish the paper as of Sept. 2, effectively ending the newspaper's 30 plus year run.

Big Sky Publishing president Stephanie Pressly said that "since the economic downturn in 2008, the News' financial performance has continued to decline, despite the company's best efforts to reverse the trend. The majority of operating revenue comes from advertising sales to local businesses. Advertising has declined dramatically as businesses juggle priorities in tough economic times," according to an article the News published Aug. 19.

But as the News shut their doors on Sept. 2, Erin Leonard and Susanne Hill, The Madisonian's owners and publishers, announced they were starting a weekly in West Yellowstone to ensure the community has a trusted news source and an effective way to advertise to readers.

"Erin and I were touched when we saw how community members came together to seek solutions when they learned their paper was closing its doors," said Hill. "We are thrilled to become a part of the West Yellowstone community and look forward to earning the advertising support a community paper needs to thrive." The West Yellowstone Star will begin printing by the end of September, Leonard and Hill announced.

Jeremy Weber will continue to serve the West Yellowstone community as editor.

Mike Moore will continue his position as reporter.

"We feel very confident taking this step with Jeremy and Mike on board. Jeremy is a talented editor and they both have a great reputation in West Yellowstone," Leonard said. "Honestly, having two established members of the West Yellowstone community as a part of the team makes this whole project all the more exciting."

To advertise in the new West Yellowstone Star, contact Susanne Hill at 596-0661 or Erin Leonard at 570-0254.

disagreed, saying they have experienced growing social conflict and lack of ethics on the Upper Madison River, as a result of increased use of the river.

What next?

Region three fisheries manager Travis Horton said the purpose of the meeting was to gather information and hear from a variety of river users.

Though he does not know if FWP will pursue a river recreation or management plan, he said any future decision will go back through another public comment period before going to the Fish and Wildlife Commission for a decision. "I don't know what we might end up proposing," Horton said. "But any way we go, there will be more public involvement and comment."

lel to, Carey Lane," she said. "Carey Lane has a Sheridan mailing address, and, historically, the two or three families who lived on what was essentially a driveway now known as Parsons Lane, used Carey Lane as their address. It's likely that this is where their mailboxes were located." Because of that, the voters who lived between the boundary between Sheridan and Twin Bridges school districts have been voting in Sheridan, but paying taxes in Twin Bridges.

That "split" in the voting system was missed, and currently affects nine voters in three households, Mumme said.

"Unfortunately, it wasn't until now that one of the residents brought this to my attention," she added.

'An incredible problem'

Madison County Commissioners meet to discuss the future of the fair

CAITLIN AVEY news@madisoniannews.com

"I feel we have an issue that we've got to get a handle on," said commissioner Dave Schulz, referring to infrastructure and capacity issues a the Madison-Jefferson County Fair.

County commissioners met last Tuesday to discuss the future of the fair with Billy Whitehurst, Montana State University Extension Office agent for Madison and Jefferson counties.

With a facility already beyond capacity, the commissioners discussed the possibility of dissolving the Madison-Jefferson County Fair, splitting it in to two separate entities, expanding the fair infrastructure and bringing in a second agent.

"This program continues to grow," said Whitehurst. "We graduated 14 (kids) and have 40 coming in and every barn, with the exception of the dairy barn, was full this year."

The continued growth of the fair and of the 4H program is something the commissioners called an amazing predicament.

"It's really an incredible problem to have," said Jim Hart. The infrastructure of the fair is one of the biggest issues commissioners face as room continues to dwindle.

"Getting the infrastructure up to code is going to be costly," said Whitehurst, adding the commissioners could look at doing a tent fair as a "Band-Aid fix" for the time being.

"It doesn't pay over time, but it could work for now," he said. Commissioners looked at dissolving the fair and the splitting the counties, which is ultimately a legislative decision, as well as offering a pay-to-play system or an out of county user fee.

Aside from the capacity issues the fair faces, Whitehurst said he is beginning to feel the wear and tear from the job – manpower has become an issue.

"4H is consuming me," said Whitehurst. "And it's easy to burn someone out."

Whitehurst is a shared agent between Madison and Jefferson counties. He brought up the idea of bringing in a second agent or an ag specialist or splitting the extension office. With 4H taking most of his time, Whitehurst said it is hard for him to keep up with other projects and aspects his job entails.

"Jefferson County has a lot of small homeowner stuff and the majority of the ag production issues comes from Madison County," he said. "No other county has this many kids in 4H and it's taking over. It's at a point where it's difficult to do both sides of this job well anymore."

The commissioners agreed a long term fix needs to happen and threw around the idea of bringing in a youth 4H extension agent or another position to come help with the 4H program.

"If we had someone handling the administrative side of 4H, I would have more time with the kids," Whitehurst said.

Another issue the commissioners and extension office will soon face is the potential to lose experienced volunteers, more specifically, the volunteers on the Livestock Sales Committee.

"Most of those volunteers won't have kids in 4H soon and their going to be looking to turn out," said Whitehurst. "We need to think about how we're going to handle losing those experienced volunteers and how we're going to replace them."

The commissioners met on Tuesday, Sept. 6, with the Jefferson County Commissioners to discuss the future of the fair and the needs of both counties.

"We need to hit while the fire's hot," said Schulz. "We don't need to sit on this."

Peak activity

Bears can be anywhere at any time, but Oyler said the majority are active in the morning, evening and at night. However, sows with cubs move about during the day.

Both black bears and grizzly bears behave differently seasonally. They emerge from their dens in the spring – at the earliest, March. By May, all bears have left their dens and are in full forage mode.

"Generally, they start low and move higher," Oyler said. "But that's dependent on the year. It isn't always like that."

"Your behavior matters most. As a rule of thumb, never run away from a bear."

- Danielle Oyler, bear education coordinator for the Southwest Montana Bear Education Working Group

By fall, bears are "eating excessively," Oyler said. This is called hyperphagia. Bears have a single track mind – to consume food to last the winter – so Oyler recommends taking extra precautions this time of the year.

Oyler also listed various signs. If you keep your eyes peeled, you have a better chance of being aware of any bears around you. Obvious signs like scat and tracks are good indicators, but overturned rocks, torn up logs, day beds, diggings and carcasses are also a result of bear activity.

Encounters

To avoid bear encounters, Oyler says to remain alert, travel in groups, make noise, carry bear spray, and refrain from recreating in the mountains during the peak activity hours.

No matter what you do, an encounter is a possibility. Unlikely, but possible.

"Your behavior matters most," Oyler said. "As a rule of thumb, never run away from a bear."

On the flipside, never approach a bear. The most important thing is to stand your ground. If a bear is at a distance "doing its own thing," Oyler said it is important to refrain from engaging and to slowly back away.

If a bear spots you, stand your ground. Observe the bear, Oyler said. If the bear disengages and looks away, back away, keeping an eye on the bear. That way, if it looks back, you can stand your ground again.

"If a bear is approaching calmly, stand your ground," Oyler said. "Look tough. Get your spray ready and wave your arms. Make noise."

A calm bear is mostly likely just curious – though that type of encounter is less common than startling a bear that turns aggressive.

"If you surprise one – which is most encounters – you can see if it is agitated or stressed," Oyler said.

A stressed bear may charge or bluff charge. Ears back, mouth open, saliva, huffing and shaking heads are all signs of an agitated bear.

"In most cases, it won't contact you," Oyler said. "Stand your ground. If it gets within 25 feet, use your bear spray."

Attendee Doris Fischer asked what you should do if you are hiking with a dog.

"That's a great question," Oyler said. "The most important thing is to have your dog under control."

Oyler said many dogs run ahead of their owners while recreating – that leads to the potential of a dog stirring up a bear, making it angry and returning to its owner for protection. Essentially, leading an angry bear to a person.

"That's why it is so important to have your dog near you," Oyler said.

Though a very small percentage of bear encounters will end with a bear making contact with a person, if it does happen and the bear is agitated, you should lie face down on the ground with your hands over your neck.

Though knowing the difference between a black bear and a grizzly bear is important (see image), Oyler said it does not change how you should respond in an encounter.

"Not identifying the species, but identifying the behavior, is the most important," she said.

Blackfoot Valley

Jim Stone, Blackfoot Valley rancher, also addressed the crowd.

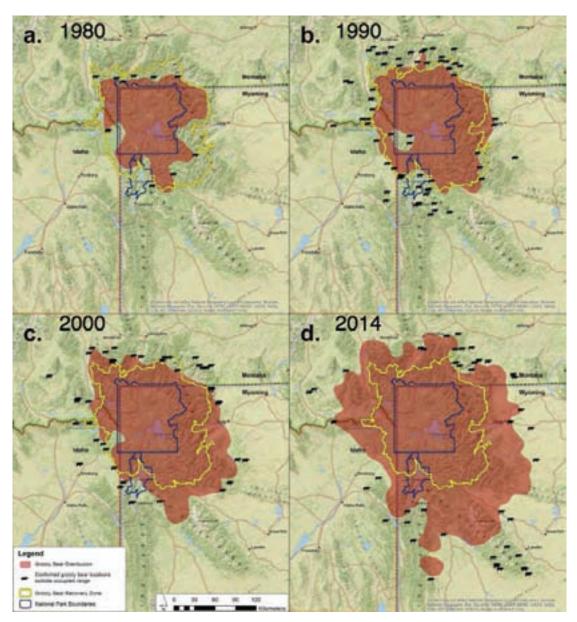

"We fell into bears and we were not prepared," Stone said.

In the early 2000s, a hunter was killed by a grizzly bear in the Blackfoot Valley, and residents realized they needed to learn to live with bears. To remove attractants, the community, with the help of the Blackfoot Challenge, a watershed group, and various partners implemented a carcass pick up program that eventually evolved into a carcass composting program.

"Those carcass pits (on ranches) were sort of like a dinner bell for bears," Stone said. "Bears would come out in the spring and start looking." Removing the carcasses from the ranches reduced what brought bears to the area, and conflicts went down. Area landowners also started using electric fences to keep bears away from calving lots and trash areas.

"It's about getting ahead of the game," Stone said. "It's about public safety. There are critters here and they are not going anywhere. We're learning to live with them with the tools in our toolbox."

Dear Editor,

My husband and I live in Atlanta, Ga., right now. We own land in the Madison Valley and plan to build/move there next vear.

The headline of a recent letter to the editor "We will have to suffer until election day," just blows my mind. The brilliant Founding

Fathers gave us a chance every four years to turn the presidential leadership over into new hands. The person writing this letter should rejoice at the opportunity, not whine at the choices presented. Despite my initial chagrin at the letter, I do find it amusing that all those metaphors resemble one of the candidates and that writer had better hope that he is elected because whether the writer knows it or not, this country is in serious trouble. Only the ones who refuse to see or just do not care are an integral part of the problem, not the solution, that we face. Maybe living in a faraway paradise like Montana and not a huge urban metropolis like we do now does not wake one up enough of the current demise we face on all fronts.

The next president will have a big challenge

Dear Editor,

The next president will have a big challenge on their agenda. How do they satisfy everyone? Who will they help and who will get left out? Here are just a few wishes of individuals and groups that want their needs met. In no special order.

College students want less expensive education. Women want equal pay for equal work. The military want more war materials. Big business wants more tax abatements. Ranchers and farmers want higher prices, but consumers want lower prices. Oil companies want more money for oil and gas, but car and truck drivers want lower gas prices. Students want less homework and need more time for themselves. Senior citizens want better and lower medical costs. The war mongers want war so they can make more money, but the peace people want no mores. The polluters want less regulations so they can pollute more and make more money, but the environmentalists want more regulations.

The Republicans and Democrats have forgotten how

Editor's note: Last month, I reached out to the community with a request. I invited all of you to submit a piece with your feelings about voting, especially on the local level. The following is our second submission. Bob Wagner, former state representative and Harrison resident, answers the prompt.

Listen to the disgust folks have for choices for president this election. Many wonder how is it that we find ourselves with such poor choices. Frankly, this is the result of voting against someone versus voting for someone. The bottom of the barrel are raised to the top of the heap, and now some say they will not vote at all. Past elections, as much as 50 percent of eligible voters failed to cast ballots. I can't say I blame them, but I would ask the question, "Why surrender your right to speak through your vote?"

This election seems to be the perfect opportunity to express your opinion. Communist, dishonest Democrat? Donald the Trump? Nobody Gary Johnson? Just be careful, you might usher in the reign of Communism in the United Sates, and if you are laughing you don't remember your history very well, because it happened in Germany – they just called theirs Nazism. Then there are the local

The Twin Bridges Falcons competed well against Victor's athletic quarterback and big, physical team. They played the Pirates close in the first half, entering the locker room trailing 7 - 14, but Victor's tough team pulled away in the third quarter. The Falcons fell to the Pirates, 13 – 28.

"I felt like our kids competed well and saw improvement from our first game," said head coach Brett Nordahl.

Wesley Harshbarger, Falcon senior and all-state linebacker and running back, has been riding the bench with an injury, but will hopefully return to the field for the Falcons' match up against Darby on Sept. 9, Nordahl said.

"We are going to focus on eliminating penalties and mental mistakes as we prepare for Darby this week," Nordahl added. "They have a solid quarterback so it will be important for all of our athletes to do their assignments every play."

Offensively, the team is working on getting into a rhythm and sustaining drives.

"Our focus will be to put points on the board when we have scoring opportunities," Nordahl concluded.

"It's been a tough season so far and we've only had two games," said Panther head coach Jake Steiner after last weekend's game against Roy. "Two more boys got injured. One with a concussion and one with a bruised sternum."

With two more players out of the lineup for at least a whole week, the Panthers are forced to forfeit next week's game against Valley Christian.

"We played six guys from the second quarter on without subs," Steiner said. "They showed a lot of heart and did good. But we don't have enough kids for next week. We can't start a football game with six kids."

Steiner said the remainder of the Panthers' season will be determined week-to-week.

"We're not going to quit practicing," he said. "We don't want them to get out of shape and have to start over if we get to play more."

After sitting out the first week of the season due to a forfeit from their scheduled opponents, the Mustangs first game was on the road against Broadview on Sept. 2.

The team charged out of the gate strong, scoring 40 points in the first quarter and 22 in the second, propelling them to an 84 – 12 win.

"Everyone on the team got a chance to play in the opener," said head coach Chris Hess. "We have back to back home games the next two weeks starting with Tri-Cities, which is a co-op of Hobson, Moore and Judith Gap."

Tri-cities moved up to eight man football this year and beat Gardner by 40 points, so Hess said the Mustangs are expecting a challenge.

"Our focus this week in practice is on special teams," he added.

Ennis takes Three Forks to five

CAITLIN AVEY news@madisoniannews.com

Volleyball season is officially here – all four Madison County teams opened the regular season last week. Sheridan hit the road to take on Drummond and West Yellowstone and Harrison hosted two games last week, battling the Lone Peak Big Horns and the Lady Prospectors from Phillipsburg. Twin Bridges traveled to Phillipsburg and hosted White Sulphur Springs for battles at the net. For a complete roundup, see below.

ENNIS

The Lady Mustangs opened their regular season hosting the Lady Wolves from neighboring Gallatin County on Tuesday, Aug. 30. The non-conference opener was a good matchup for the Mustangs, as they took the Lady Wolves to five games, losing the final set.

The Lady Mustangs started strong, leading the Wolves by five toward the end of the first set. With the game point on the line, the Lady Wolves made a quick comeback to take the lead by one, 24-25. Needing a two-point lead to take the set, the Mustangs fought back and it was Martin's monster kill from the outside that kept the game in play. Connecting with junior setter Payton Fortner, Martin turned around for another quick kill from the middle of the net.

As the game rallied back and forth, it was the strong hitting from Martin, Klein and senior Brigit Croy that put the Mustangs in the lead, taking the first set 29-27.

The Lady Mustangs went on to win the third set, securing a five set match, but ultimately losing in the fifth set, 3-15.

Klein and Martin led the team in both kills and blocks, while junior Whitney McKitrick, who made her starting varsity debut, led the team in digs with 16 passes from the back row.

Ennis hosted Drummond on Sept. 2, defeating the Trojans in four sets. Croy led the team, contributing in blocks, kills, aces and digs, while Klein put down 18 kills against the Lady Trojans.

The Mustangs conference standings are 1-0 as they head into a cross-county game against Twin Bridges on Sept. 8.

Ennis v. Three Forks: 29-27, 21-25, 25-20, 19-25, 3-15 Ennis v. Drummond: 21-25, 25-22, 25-14, 25-17

HARRISON

The Lady Wildcats hosted Lone Peak and Phillipsburg on Sept. 2 and 3, respectively, but lost to both the Big Horns and the Prospectors in three sets.

"Both games were hard played," said Wildcat head coach Phil Taylen. "Being the first two games for Harrison against teams who both played in tournaments, they did very well. The Wildcats are getting better day-by-day."

The Lady Wildcats will host Drummond on Sept. 8 and head across the county on Sept. 10 to take on the Lady Falcons.

Harrison v. Lone Peak: 12-25, 13-25, 10-25 Harrison v. Phillipsburg: 19-25, 8-25, 15-25

SHERIDAN

The Lady Panthers were traveling last weekend –they were in Drummond on Sept. 1 to take on the Lady Trojans and in West Yellowstone on Sept. 3 for a match up against the Lady Wolverines.

The Panthers lost to Drummond in three sets. Seniors Tionna Schwend and Janie Smart led the Panthers in kills, while freshman Micara Devereaux led the team in assists.

The Panthers fared a little better during their game against West Yellowstone, but ultimately lost the match in four sets. Smart and Schwend led the Lady Panthers in both kills and blocks, getting big at the net

TWIN BRIDGES

The Lady Falcons were in Phillipsburg to take on the Lady Prospectors on Sept. 1 – they defeated the Prospectors in four sets. Brooke Schandelmeier led the team in kills, aces and digs for the Lady Falcons. Kailee Oliverson acted big at the net, taking four of the team's six digs and Savanna Stewart led the team in assists.

CLARIFICATION

In the District Court round up in the Aug. 25 edition of The Madisonian, it should have stated: On Aug. 22, David Albert Banks, Sr., 62, appeared at the Madison County Courthouse before Judge Loren Tucker on the charge of driving under the influence of alcohol, fourth offense.

The Madisonian apologizes for any confusion.

You could say it was love at first sight. "Nancy moved here in the fifth grade," said Ron Paige.

throughout the state – including the Montana State Prison Ranch for 17 years – before finally settling back home in Twin Bridges.

"We had a lot of good experiences growing up here," said Ron. "It always felt like this was our hometown."

After retiring and building a home back in the town where they first met, the couple quickly started giving back to the community that gave them so much. Nancy volunteers at the historical society a couple days a week, informing visitors about local history. She also helps at the Madison-Jefferson County Fair where she is the "food supervisor" or the main person who prepares all the food entries for judging.

"I think I've been helping with the fair for 10 years now and maybe at the museum for about eight," Nancy said.

Nancy said she enjoys giving back because she has the time to do so.

"A lot of people work and they are not able to take off a lot of time," she said.

Ron helps out with the Falcon football team as a member of the chain-gang during home games. The couple both help sell tickets at the rodeo and have both been involved in the new senior center.

"I think there are a lot of opportunities to give back to the community," said Ron. "Almost every organization or group is looking for people to help out."

"It's important to be available when you are needed," added Nancy. "And we're able to do that."

RENTING OUT YOUR HOME

REAL ESTATE CORNER

SUBMITTED BY TONI BOWEN ERA Landmark Arrow Real Estate

Using rental income to offset a portion of the monthly mortgage payment is an attractive op-Fion for many homeowners. If you are thinking about renting out your spare bedroom, in-law suite, or guest house (whether long term or short term), be aware of these potential problems, BEFORE you take on a tenant:

1. Rental Income is Taxable -Federal, State and Local taxes may apply. Make sure your income will' cover your taxes.

2. Taxable Income can be Offset by Valid Expenses - such as advertising, cleaning, maintenance, insurance, repairs, supplies, utilities, depreciation, etc.

3. Renters May Damage your Property - Collect a security deposit to cover minor damage and check to see if your homeowners insurance will cover your property if it is rented out.

4. You Could Run Afoul of the Law - Failing to provide safe, habitable housing, failure to provide proper advance notice before entering tenant's unit, violating city housing codes or zoning, failing to provide promised amenifies, charging a security deposit that exceeds state maximums, failure to provide sufficient heat or air conditioning, to name a few.

5. Limit Services to Tenants - Providing too many services to tenants may cause your rental to be classified as a B & B, services such as regular cleaning, meals, chang-ing line, etc. would be considered "running a hotel" business for tax purposes, meaning you would have to pay both Federal Income and Self-Employment taxes on your rental income.

6. Vacation Rentals - Services such as VRBO and Airbnb are blurring the lines between residential and commercial property which can cause problems with Home Owners' Associations interpreting covenants and restrictions on commercial activities. Make sure your covenants allow your rental activity.

7. Mortgage Lenders are Confused - Lenders are subjecting some refinance customers who rent out rooms or homes to additional scrutiny. Some borrowers may no longer be eligible for certain kinds of loans or have to pay higher interest rates and tougher underwriting standards, including larger down payments.

8. Homeowner's Insurance Coverage - Traditional insurance policies may not cover certain activities. You must think carefully about your liability for any injuries or property damage occurring while someone is renting your home. Read your policy carefully. Policies vary from insurer to insurer and from state to state. But they almost always exclude coverage for homeowners who are running a business in their home.

9. Host Platform Coverage -Some short-term hosting platforms provide liability insurance to their hosts. Airbnb provides primary liability coverage for up to $1 million per occurrence. Homeaway/VRBO does not provide liability insurance coverage but recommends shortterm coverage from http://cbizspecialtyinsurance.com/vacation-rental/.

10. Good luck! There is a lot to consider before deciding to rent out your property. Make šure you do your homework, understand the pluses and minuses and buy appropriate coverage.

Buzz from the schools

Welcome back to our newish column, "Buzz from the schools." In each edition of the paper, the superintendent from one of Madison County's schools – Alder, Ennis, Harrison, Sheridan and Twin Bridges – will keep us up-to-date.

Hello from Ennis!

It has been a very exciting first two weeks of school in Ennis. We are up around 40 students kindergarten through 12th-grade. Increased enrollment this year will have a positive impact on the general fund budget next year. Schools budgets are driven by enrollment counts in October and February. You probably have heard the acronym ANB. This stands for Average Number Belonging. Some confuse this with the actual student count, but it is not the actual count. To determine the ANB of a district, you add the count from October and February and divide it by two to get the average. The other part of the calculation is to divide 187 (teacher contract days) by 180 (student days). By dividing these two numbers, you get 1.039. Next, you take the average of the two counts and multiply it by 1.039. Let's say the average of the two counts was 250. Take 250 and multiply it by 1.039 and then you get 259.75. As you can see, the ANB is higher than the actual student count. With school funding, schools can use the three year ANB average if it is higher than the current year ANB. This gives the schools an opportunity to help their budgets.

Another focus I would like to talk on again is our technology. On the second PIR day, the staff received very beneficial digital classroom training from a company out of Bozeman. We are excited to take what we have learned and apply that to the classroom to maximize student learning. It is the goal to continue to offer appropriate professional development to the staff to ensure technology is effectively utilized. Prior to the first day of school, high school students were issued WinBooks to use in the classroom and at home for school purposes. What a wonderful opportunity for our students.

The staff received a CSA training (coaches/supervisor/advisor) from the schools liability insurance carrier. The training was mandatory for all extracurricular advisors and the attendance was great. The training focused on ensuring that we understood the importance of the law and handbook language to foster a positive and safe environment for students and coaches. In attendance was a lawyer to answer questions regarding what the law states, etc. The training was definitely a great benefit to our staff.

Ennis sophomore works toward pilot's license

REPARING

CAITLIN AVEY news@madisoniannews.com

Emmett Lingle took his first flight when he was two hours old. Now, 16 years later, Emmett is preparing for his first solo flight and is one step closer to achieving his pilot's license.

Emmett was born with severe birth defects that required him to be life flighted to Salt Lake City to undergo several surgeries.

"Doctors expected some lasting health complications but he has really thrived despite his rough start," said Emmett's mother Alicia. "He is just so strong and determined."

Emmett began flying when he was just 12 years old, but has had an interest in aviation since he was little.

"He was that 2-year-old kid that would point at the sky and say 'plane!," said Alicia. "It's just always something he's loved and something that appeals to him."

"It's been real fun," said Emmett.

ABIGAIL DENNIS/THE MADISONIAN

A high school sophomore, Emmett said he enjoys skiing and fishing as well as flying around the big sky above Madison County.

Starting with the basics, Emmett has learned just about everything there is to flying and operating a plane.

"I had to take test and I have to be able to do takeoffs and landings and just prove that I'm good enough to do it," Emmett said about his solo flight.

From learning the controls and all the rules and regulations to understanding flight patterns to being able to recognize maintenance issues, Tim has taken a hands-on teaching approach.

"We'll go up and actually do something and then I'll write down or draw out what we did," said Tim. "But I'm much more hands on when it comes to teaching and understanding the process."

Alicia said she feels very comfortable with Emmett taking to the sky. "He just started driving and I'm more comfortable with him flying because he's been doing it so long!" she exclaimed. "It thrills me that he has an interest in flying and that he could make a career out of it." "I don't really know yet," Emmett said about his future flying goals.

"He's constantly looking for his next adventure-from the moment he was born,

"It's just fun to fly around and learn stuff – you can see everything and it's great," he said.

Preparing to go solo

Since he was 12, Emmett has been taking flying lessons from local pilot Tim Cherwin. Tim began flying when he was just 8 years old, taking notes from his dad, who piloted for United. Tim's interest and love for aviation took him into a career with the United States Army where he flew the AH-64 Apache on combat operations and flew commercial before flying overseas with various contracting positions. He served several deployments to Afghanistan as an Intelligence Surveillance Reconnaissance pilot.

"The first thing you want to do with anyone learning to fly is establish confidence," said Tim. "Let them do everything and get relaxed and make them see they can actually do it."

Tim describes a pilot's mentality as "live or die."

"It's really kind of cheesy but it is a live or die mentality," he said. "You have to decide your state of mind – are you going to panic or are you going to observe what is around you?"

There is no room for panic when it comes to piloting any sort of aircraft and it takes a strong and determined individual to feel comfortable – an individual like Emmett.

"No, it's not really scary at all actually," Emmett said with a certain comfort in his voice. "Tim's a great pilot and I trust him – he'd never let me do something I wasn't ready to do or something I shouldn't do, so I guess I've gotten a boost there."

"I like being able to do it myself and get myself places."

What the future holds

"It's a real cool culture," Emmett said about the flying lifestyle. "Flying is the best part, but you meet really good people."

At just 16, Emmett's passions and talents are unique. Whether he will decide to pursue his love for snow and skiing or use his knowledge of building rods and tying flies to pursue a life as a fly fisherman, is unknown. But his mother suspects aviation, no matter the form, will always be part of his life.

"I don't know which of his interests will ultimately be what he makes a career out of but he's always loved to be up in the air," said Alicia. "He's constantly seeking his next adventure-from the moment he was born, he hit the ground running."

HEALTH & WELLNESS Put immunizations on your back-to-school list

SUBMITTED BY JON EBELT Department of Public Health and Human Services

The Department of Public Health and Human Services reminds parents to be aware of the Montana school immunization requirements as the 2016-2017 school year is beginning. Parents are encouraged to review their children's immunization record to ensure they are up-to-date for the upcoming school year.

"Back-to-school vaccinations help protect children, families and school staff from vaccine preventable diseases," said Bekki Wehner, DPHHS immunization program manager. "If you haven't done so already, now is the time to check with your healthcare provider to find out what vaccines your child needs."

Children entering or attending kindergarten through grade 12 are required to have two doses of measles, mumps rubella (MMR) vaccine, two doses of varicella (chickenpox) vaccine, three doses of polio vaccine and four doses of diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis (DTaP) vaccine. Students in seventh through 12th grades are also required to have one dose of tetanus, diphtheria, pertussis (Tdap) vaccine.

Wehner said as long as a student has received at least one vaccine in the required series, that student may qualify for a conditional attendance as allowed by current regulations. A conditional attendance provision allows the student to stay in school while they finish the required shots.

In 2015, Montana added varicella and Tdap to the list of shots required for school. Since then, Montana has shown improvement on adolescent immunization rates.

Tdap coverage has increased from 84.7 percent in 2014 to 89.5 percent in 2015. Varicella coverage rates in adolescents also increased from 62.4 percent to 73.3 percent, according to 2015 National Immunization Survey data. In addition to vaccines required for school, Human Papillomavirus (HPV) and Meningococcal (MCV) vaccines are recommended for all teens and the annual influenza vaccine is recommended for everyone 6 months and older. DPHHS encourages parents to talk to their family physician or local health department should they have questions if their child is up-to-date on all recommended vaccines.

All children in Montana are eligible to receive low or no cost vaccines through their health plan or the Vaccines for Children Program. For more information visit www.dphhs.mt.gov.

3 things you my not know about life insurance today

SUBMITTED BY STATEPOINT

If you are like many Americans, you may spend substantial time and energy on general financial planning while overlooking the various ways life insurance may fit into that plan. Life insurance has wide-ranging benefits for people of all ages that you should consider, say experts.

"There is a significant opportunity for life insurance to help you achieve financial security during any age of saving, and for the many concerns you face throughout your lifetime," said Andrew Bucklee, senior vice president and head of Insurance Solutions Distribution for Lincoln Financial Distributors. "It should be part of most consumers' long-term financial plan."

September is Life Insurance Awareness Month and the perfect opportunity to learn more about how it can help you protect your financial security. Here are a few things to consider.

• If you only associate life insurance with helping address funeral expenses or estate planning, take note, depending on the type of policy, life insurance can potentially be used to protect against concerns like retirement savings, loss of household income due to illness, children's college tuition expenses and long-term care in retirement. What is more, life insurance can be used as an overarching vehicle for

DESKBOUND DEGENERATION

Some beneficial alternatives to a harmful workplace practice

Tonight, while watching the television news, I listened to a reporter announce that a recent study shows too much sitting is bad for a person's heart. Naturally, (because I was sitting in my easy chair at the time) I was alarmed. So, I sprang from the recliner, dashed to my computer desk and spent the next three hours sitting on my ever-blossoming butt, recording my thoughts on this weighty matter.

people could degenerate (atrophy) prematurely. Hence, as I see it, the study's findings are targeted more at office workers than, let's say, ironworkers. So, with the welfare of deskbound employees in mind, I compiled the following heart-healthy alternatives to sitting while in the office environment.

Pre-work:

At home, throw on a stylish sweat suit and lace up formal running shoes.

• On the way to work, while waiting for a red light

• When gossiping at the water cooler, add a physical dimension to the conversation by including those being gossiped about.

• Install trampolines at copier machines to be used while waiting for documents to be copied.

To increase your • heart rate chemically, during scheduled breaks, eat sugary doughnuts and drink highoctane coffee.

• During a lengthy (boring) business meeting, impress the boss by bouncing up and performing a solo flash dance.

Mechanical aides: • When ascending in an elevator, run in place, thereby doubling your exertion rate.

• Attach remotely activated pilot ejection seats to the chairs of especially reluctant exercisers to provide them with an imposed, pulsestimulating pause from sitting.

• Install a treadmill in front of all height-adjustable desktops.

• From time to time, to provide your fellow employees with an invigorating, heartbeneficial chair dismount, pull the fire alarm.

CLEAN, DRAIN AND DRY

Aquatic invasive species, including parasites and other diseases, are easily spread from one water body to the other. Anyone who works or plays in or around water can unknowingly transport non-native species including anglers, boaters, construction workers, pond owners, gardeners, seaplane pilots, field workers - the list goes on and on. It takes only one mistake to potentially infest a new water body. Once an aquatic invasive species is established in a water body, complete eradication is usually impossible or prohibitively expensive, which is why prevention is so important.

It is not enough to just clean your waders and wading boots, or to rinse off your boat to help control the spread of invasive species. For instance, if your kids went into the water with shoes on, remember to clean their shoes/clothes/toys, or if your dog has been in the water, clean the dog, its collar, etc. We all need to pay attention to clean ANYTHING (or anyone) that comes in contact with our precious waterways.

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks recommends a three point rule of thumb to help the spread of AIS: CLEAN, DRAIN and DRY.

CLEAN: Completely remove all sand, mud, water, debris and vegetation before leaving the access area.

•Inspect your boat, trailer and ALL gear. Pay attention to crevices and hidden areas.

•Remove all vegetation (by hand or sprayer), with fresh water if possible.

•Remove all mud (use a pressurized power sprayer, found at most do-it-yourself car washes). The hot water kills organisms and the pressure removes mud and vegetation. No need to use chemicals or soap. •Dispose of debris in trash or on dry land away from water or ramp. DRAIN: Drain all water from watercraft and equipment.

•Drain or remove water from boat, bilge, live well, engine, internal compartments and bait buckets by removing drain plugs before leaving the access area.

DRY: Aquatic invaders can survive only in water and wet areas.

•Dry your watercraft and ALL fishing/recreational equipment thoroughly. This will kill most invasive species. For instance, waders and wading boots should be dried inside

Make sure you do things like turning gravel guards up so they dry underneath, and consider allowing five days in between trips to allow thorough drying.

Additionally, there are other rules to live by, and common sense ways to think about your role on the landscape, and how you may unknowingly may spread AIS and disease.

Don't release live animals! Never move authorization, and don't release live baitfish or aquarium fish into Montana waters. You may think you are being kind by doing so, but in actuality you are breaking the law and damaging Montana's aquatic resources.

If you have a water garden or are a pond owner: never transplant aquatic plants or animals from your pond into other water bodies. Follow all regulations concerning pond building and stocking. You need a permit from Montana FWP in order to build a pond and stock it with fish. Whenever possible use native plants and animals for your pond or garden. FWP strongly recommends only using fish from Montana hatcheries, as these are regularly tested for AIS. Obtain the necessary permits for possessing controlled species of fish such as koi and goldfish. And, properly dispose of unwanted plants or animals.

B3

If you are a teacher or an aquarium owner, do not purchase prohibited species for your aquarium or terrarium. You can find out what is permitted or not from the local FWP office or from the website. For instance, red-eared slider turtles are now prohibited in Montana. FWP has partnered with the "Don't Let It Loose" campaign to help the public find homes for displaced pets. Remember to never transplant aquarium plants or animals into lakes, streams or wetlands.

If you are a field worker in the world of water or wetlands, separate all individual components such as insoles, socks, booties, ankle guards and laces. Wash all components separately. Remove all sediment, vegetation and aquatic animals from all equipment. Pay particular attention to the soles of waders. Disinfect all equipment in a 20 percent commercial bleach solution for 10 minutes or a 5 percent bleach solution for one hour. If chlorine disinfection is not used, an alternative is to ensure all equipment is thoroughly cleaned with hot water such as in a bucket or bathtub and allowed to soak for sufficient time to allow components to reach water temperature, and allowed to dry completely. Always work from upstream to downstream.

Though summer is drawing to an end, fishing can be fantastic all autumn long and hunting season has us traipsing through streams and wetlands all around our state. It is up to every recreationalist, no matter what our age or form of fun, to do our part to prevent the spread of disease and invasive species. Clean, drain and dry everything and everyone who touches our waterways!

Furthermore, instituting the above beneficial alternatives to sitting may also result in increased productivity. After all, alert workers are more efficient workers. Meanwhile, I'll be watching for any televised updates on deskbound degeneration from my recliner.

My father lived in a period of time where he got to see the transition from horse and buggy to the automobile and see a man step on the moon. He had a couple of shorts he liked to tell about horses. Read on, to hear my father's tales.

I had a classmate in medical school who hailed from West Virginia named Phil Azar. Phil was telling me one day of a trip out into the hinterlands from his hometown to hunt birds. He was in a party with three others, one of whom had recently been released from the state penitentiary - for what offense, I don't recall. When they drove up to a farmhouse to ask the owner for permisa good mind to kill that old horse over there."

And with that, he threw a shell in the chamber, stepped over and shot the old horse right between the eyes.

Well, this caused more than a minor stir among the boys in the car, which was more than understandable. Here was a guy fresh out of the pen, who went out of his way to shoot a farmer's horse just because old John F. wouldn't let him hunt on his land. The driver threw the car into gear, picked up the culprit and started to hightail it out of there, when the ex-con confessed. I think it's a funny story, reminiscent of some guys I know.

Here's another horse story from my father:

Dr. Burton of Butte had a friend who bought a blooded horse and sent him to a special trainer over on the other side of Deer Lodge. One morning the trainer called to tell the owner that he had some bad news – his horse had died during the night. The trainer said he got up and found the horse lying here and had no idea what he had died of, but he didn't move the horse as he thought the owner would want to drive over and size up the situation. The owner replied that he had done lots of stupid things in his life, but that he had never driven 50 miles to look at a dead horse.

COMMODITY INSITE!: Adjust and be nimble

by Jerry Welch

The past six to seven months have been the most confusing, exasperating and capricious that I can recall when it concerns the commodity markets. Prices have been roller coaster-like, frustrating the bulls as well as the bears. Everything is coming down to one head fake followed by another. And it is not helping matters that the world's central banks embrace negative interest rates while the United States Fed is threatening to hike rates in this county. It has been an incredibly difficult environment in which operate and in particular for commodities.

Adam Smith was an 18th century economist and freemarket thinker credited with the term, "invisible hand." According to Investopedia, "The term 'invisible hand' is a metaphor for how, in a free market economy, self-interested individuals operate through a system of mutual interdependence to promote the general benefit of society at large." Investopedia goes on to state, "There are two critical ideas behind the invisible hand. First, voluntary trades in a free market produce unintentional and widespread benefits. Second, these benefits are greater than those of a regulated, planned economy."

Based on how most all markets have been performing most of this year, I would bet that Adam Smith is turning over in his grave trying to grasp how and why the "invisible hand" is causing so much confusion in the marketplace. But I believe Smith is wrong. The reason for such capricious market behavior is due to "the funds," "the algo boys" and "the high frequency traders." The "invisible hand" has nothing to do with it.

instance. On March 1, new crop soybean prices closed at $8.70 a bushel amid forecasts from the USDA and host of private firms that prices were headed to $8 or less. But without warning, prices suddenly headed north and in mid-June the market touched $11.88 a bushel. Along the way, there were a few reports justifying the $3.18 cent rally such as problems with the Argentine crop, lower ending soy stocks as pegged by the USDA and less planted acres. To most, the rally was justified based on supplydemand fundamentals.

Take the soybean market for

But soybeans and virtually all other commodity markets inexplicably began to head south in June. This week, new crop soybeans fell to $9.37 a bushel. The soybean market has, thus far, given back $2.51 a bushel of a $3.18 rally. Worse yet, corn prices during that time, through and including this week, fell to a seven year low, wheat and rice to a 10 year low and oat prices to an 11 year low. So much for the "justified" March to June rally!

The cattle market has been just as difficult to explain as the soybean market or the grain complex. In mid-June about the time soybean prices peaked out, October live cattle futures nearly touched a high of $120 but in late July, prices fell to a five year low of approximately $105. But out of the blue, the market caught a bid and suddenly rallied back up to $116, in early August. It is a rare and bullish scenario for cattle to rally $11 but they did.

Unfortunately, and identical to the soybean market, cattle futures began to leak and leak badly. This week, prices slumped to a new five year low with the October contract dropping within a blink of $101. The cattle market fell $14 after rising $11. It was a $25 swing up and back down in only four weeks. Pure roller coaster trading!

Such erratic and confusing price swings are not confined to cattle, soybeans and other grains. Silver, gold and copper futures also staged white-knuckle rallies that were quite impressive only to succumb to sharp declines with the losses offsetting previous gains. The same scenario was seen with cocoa, coffee and cotton futures.

The only markets that have not experienced sharp rallies following by equally ugly declines are U.S. stocks and bonds, both paper markets. Those markets remain relatively well bid and continue to be historically high priced by any measure and defy gravity every day. Thus, hard assets, "real world" markets as I refer to them, are not doing nearly as well as paper assets.

How long the current scenario, hard assets unable to sustain rallies while paper assets simply do not decline will last is anyone's guess. If I am correct in that the dollar is headed lower from current levels, the bloom may come off the paper markets to some extent and allow the hard asset markets to catch a much needed bid. But the dollar that fell to a two month low in mid-August has since recovered impressively. A strong dollar continues to cap rallies with hard assets

Moving forward, ag-producers and traders need to adjust to the current roller coaster market environment and be nimble. Adjust and be nimble. It is that simple. But then again, we know full well it is not that simple.

Robertson Scholarship available for Ennis alumni

SUBMITTED BY ROSS LINGLE Ennis Schools

The Margie and James Robertson scholarship is again available to all Ennis High School graduates. In order to be eligible for this scholarship, students must be enrolled in a state university, technical school or vocational school under the license or control of the state of Montana. Students are eligible for the scholarship for up to four years upon annual reapplication.

To apply, students must send a letter of application to the Robertson Scholarship Committee at Ennis High School, P.O. Box 517, Ennis, MT 59729.

Along with this letter students need to include receipts for expenses such as tuition, room and board and books. If students have not applied for this scholarship previously and meet the qualifications above, they are encouraged to apply. All application packets must be dropped off at the high school or postmarked by Oct. 10, 2016.

If you have questions regarding the requirements for the scholarship contact Ennis High School counselor Ross Lingle at 682-4258 or rlingle@ennisschools.org. A detailed description is also available at www.ennisschools.org by clicking on the "scholarships" tab and then "alumni scholarships."

SUBMITTED BY EMMA STEFFEN Harrison School

On Tuesday, Aug. 30, students, teachers and staff at Harrison Public School went on an all-school float trip on the Madison River.

The trip was planned by the teachers at Harrison who wanted to come up with a fun way to close out the summer and kickoff the new school year. The students traveled down the river in pods, accompanied by lationship building experience among all the members of Harrison's school community, with students across all ages spending time with one another and getting to better know their teachers and staff members.

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks lifted fishing restrictions Tuesday on three Southwest Montana rivers given improved conditions.

The Madison, Gallatin and East Gallatin rivers are now fully open to fishing. Meanwhile, the three Hole River remain closed to all fishing until further notice:

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks' Maiden Rock fishing access site to Notch Bottom FAS;

Saginaw Bridge on Skinner Meadows Road to the confluence of the North Fork Big Hole River and Big Hole River; to confluence with the Beaverhead River.

The entire Jefferson River also remains closed.

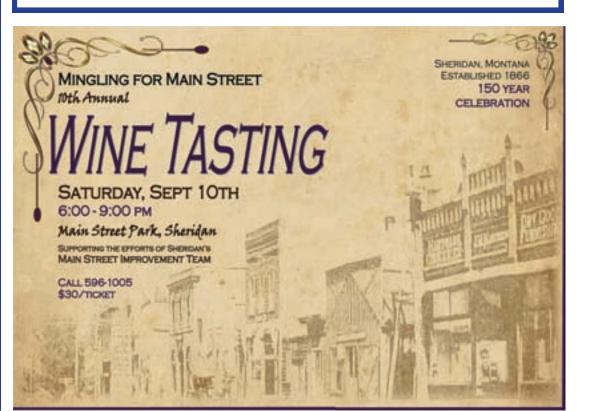

Although flows have improved on the Big Hole and Jefferson rivers, the criteria for reopening listed in drought management plans for these rivers have not yet been met.

FWP opens two stretches of Yellowstone River

SUBMITTED BY ANDREA JONES Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks opened two sections of the Yellowstone River Thursday, Sept. 1, due to the improvement of environmental conditions that led the FWP to close the river and all of its associated tributaries on Aug. 19.

On Thursday, after going over current testing results and river conditions, FWP opened an upper section of the Yellowstone River to non-angling recreation only; the other section below Livingston will open completely to recreation. The main stem of the Yellowstone River through much of Paradise Valley south of Livingston will remain closed at this time.

Gov. Steve Bullock supported opening parts of the Yellowstone River and acknowledged the implications of the decision to the local economy.

"I join Montanans in being encouraged by this first step, but we're not out of the woods yet and we must ensure that we are safeguarding Montana jobs while keeping this threat at bay," Bullock said. "A threat to the health of Montana's fish populations is a threat to Montana's entire outdoor economy and the tens of thousands of jobs it sustains, and I want to thank all Montanans and visitors for their ongoing support as we work to protect and preserve the health and economic benefit of the Yellowstone River for this and future generations."

The details of the decision are as follows: Section one

The Yellowstone River and all of its tributaries from the northern boundary of Yellowstone National Park in Gardiner, downstream to the Carbella fishing access site, which is operated by the Bureau of Land Management, are open to all nonangling recreational uses. Angling remains closed in this section to protect the Yellowstone cutthroat trout fishery. On Sept. 6, department biologists will float this section to assess any change in fishery health during this period of nonangling recreational use. In the event this section does not show any detrimental change in fishery health, it will be open immediately to all uses that day.

Section two The main stem Yellowstone River from the Carbella BLM fishing access site downstream to the Highway 89 Bridge fishing access site near Livingston, remains closed to all public occupation and recreation per the original Aug. 19 closure. However, all Yellowstone River tributaries in this section, including Armstrong, Depuy's and Nelson's spring creeks, are open to all uses. Section three

The Yellowstone River and all of its tributaries downstream from the Highway 89 Bridge fishing access site to the Highway 212 bridge in Laurel are open to all uses, with the exception of the Shields River and all of its tributaries, which remain closed to all public occupation and recreation per the original Aug. 19 closure in order to protect the Yellowstone cutthroat trout fishery. The main stem Yellowstone River and all tributaries downstream from the Highway 212 bridge in Laurel were never part of a closure, and remain open to all uses.

FWP director Jeff Hagener appreciates the public support and responsiveness to the closure that was deemed necessary to protect the sustainability of the Yellowstone River fishery.

"Recognizing the value of the fishery, the department is restoring appropriate and beneficial uses of the Yellowstone River system as quickly as is prudent, given the unprecedented nature of the event," Hagener said.

3 Rivers Communications awards $2,000 to Sheridan Public Library

SUBMITTED BY SUSAN M. WILSON 3 Rivers Communications

3 Rivers Communications recently awarded a $2,000 Community Enhancement Grant to the Sheridan Public Library and archives.

"The grant from 3 Rivers will assist us in finishing the shelving in our new archive addition. We appreciate the support that 3 Rivers has given us and our community in preserving our historical assets," said Carol Delisi upon receiving the funds.

Cynthia Shackleton, President of the Sheridan Public Library Board, described their plans, saying, "In support of our mission to provide efficient library services to all residents of our community we are planning and fundraising for an expansion of the library building to improve access to technology, increase educational programing for children, develop storage facilities for historic documents and create space for public gatherings. We are in the first phase of this process."

While looking at the new archive room in the library, 3 Rivers customer service liaison Kevin McWilliams explained that the 3 Rivers Community Enhancement Grant program was put in place in 2005 to support local organizations with projects that make lasting improvements in their community. "In the last year we have supported many local groups with Community Enhancement Grants including the Madison Valley Medical Center, the Sheridan Cooperative Group and the Twin Bridges and Thompson Hickman libraries," McWilliams said. "We realize that many folks are committed to making their community a better place for everyone and we're proud that 3 Rivers is able to offer this support."

The fight against aquatic invasives – Clean. Drain. Dry

SUBMITTED BY ANDREA JONES Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks

The fish kill on the Yellowstone River highlights the importance of the battle against aquatic invasive species. It is important that all recreationists understand the role they play in preventing the introduction and spread of aquatic invasive species and other harmful organisms.

As part of the re-opening of parts of the Yellowstone River to recreation, Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks is also placing two AIS inspection stations on the Interstate 90 corridor near Livingston and Hardin. All watercraft must stop at AIS inspection stations. This includes rafts, float tubes, kayaks and stand up paddle boards, along with motorized watercraft.

The key to protecting Montana's waters from AIS is captured in the mantra: Clean, Drain, Dry. So, after visiting any water body, follow these steps:

Clean: Scrub all gear and equipment including waders, anchors, nets, etc. If the item is fibrous (i.e. rope or felt-soled waders) use water and a scrub brush. Make sure to use clean water and remove all dirt and mud.

Drain: Simply drain all compartments – bilge, live well, coolers, rafts, etc.

Dry: Aquatic invaders can survive only in water and wet areas, so plan your activity with dry time as a consideration.

Make clean, drain and dry a habit, just like packing a cooler or protecting your fly rod for the trip home.

For more information on how to clean your equipment, go to http://fwp.mt.gov/fishAndWildlife/species/ais/prevention.html

Sheridan Corps of Discovery

SUBMITTED BY LAURIE BARTOLETTI Sheridan Schools

Approximately 40 Sheridan middle school students spent two days on an overnight adventure at Cliff and Wade lakes. Community building and teamwork was the focus of the Corps of Discovery. Time was spent on team building: discovering how to cross the "Grand Canyon," make it through the black hole unscathed, capture the mascot and cross raging waters. Crews were responsible for tent set-up and meals. Nighttime entertainment was provided by students' creative skits and rap songs. Highlights included hiking, swimming and canoeing. The journey was possible with funds from the Turner Grant Foundation.

Hawaiian party at Madison Valley Manor

SUBMITTED BY MELODY CLARK Madison Valley Manor

The residents at Madison Valley Manor enjoyed a Hawaiian happy hour on Aug. 19. They had their very own hula dancer, B.J. Deavers, to entertain them. They even joined in on the dancing. They dressed in their beautiful colored Hawaiian shirts and sipped on Mai Tais. On Tuesday, Aug. 30, a group took a trip to Alder for lunch and a scenic drive. Some of the ladies went to McAllister for lunch on Thursday, Sept. 1. They did crafts with Oakley over the weekend.
